The Business Of Farming

—like the business of Manufacturing—should be done in a practical business way. Proceeds should be put in a bank. Payments should be made by Cheque. A certain percentage of the profits should be put in a Savings Account as an emergency fund. The man who has a cash surplus in a bank, is protected against bad seasons and hard times.

THE DELINEATOR—Regular price $1.50 for 75c, for a full year if called for at the store. This offer closes Jan. 30th.

"WITH THE ALLIES"—A new book by Richard Harding Davis, about the war. Mr. Davis is an American and writes from an American's view point, and he says, "Germany is defying the rules of war and the rules of humanity, — and for us to maintain a neutral attitude of mind is unworthy, and the attitude of a coward." "Had President Wilson seen this war he would never have written his letter." Mr. Davis was present at the burning of Louvain, the bombardment of Rheims, and the battle of Soissons. He was arrested as a spy and narrowly escaped death. His book is thrilling from preface to finish. Get a copy here.

PATRIOTISM AND PRODUCTION CONFERENCES

The Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, is arranging to hold a series of agricultural meetings in every Province in Canada to encourage farmers to raise more food-stuffs the coming year. These meetings are called Patriotism and Production Conferences. Public meetings will be held in Napanee on Wednesday afternoon and evening, Feb. 10th, at 3 p.m., and 7.30 p.m. Every farmer in the County is invited to hear the speakers, Mr. John Fixter, Assistant Agriculturist, Commission of Conservation Ottawa, will speak on "The Duty and the Opportunity of The Canadian Farmer," in relation to "Farm Crops," and Mr. F. R. Mallory, prominent farmer and breeder of Holstein cattle, Frankford, Ont., will speak on the same subject in relation to "Live Stock."

At the evening meeting Mayor Alexander will preside and in addition to the speeches, a musical program of patriotic songs will be rendered. Mr. J. Lockie Wilson, Superintendent of Agricultural Societies, Toronto, will speak. In addition, Mr. C. C. James, an old Napanee boy, now in charge of the expenditure of the $10,000,000 grant by the Dominion Government for Agriculture in Canada, has been invited to speak on "Agriculture in Russia" and "The Effect of the Present War on the Food Supplies of Britain."

Invitations have been sent to the Farmers' Institutes, Farmers' Clubs and all Agricultural Societies in the County to co-operate in making these meetings a decided success, and result in increased production of food-stuff in the County of Lennox and Addington. All are welcome at these meetings.

REV. GORDON'S MEETINGS

OVERFLOWING AUDIENCES GREET HIM EACH NIGHT.

The better citizenship meetings being held in Grace, Trinity and St. Andrew's churches are a huge success from the point of attendance, at any rate.

Mr. Gordon's addresses on the everyday day troubles of any community were highly appreciated and thoroughly enjoyed. His plain speaking, while somewhat distasteful to some, are necessary if the community are to be led to see things as they really are and learn to apply the proper remedy.

Each night the meeting place has been packed, many having to stand up on every occasion. People from considerable distances are driving to town on purpose to attend these meetings, and lasting good should be the result of Mr. Gordon's visit to Napanee. The singing of Mr. A. E. Greenlaw, who is gifted with a splendid voice is a feature of the meetings and adds much to the success of the campaign. Mr. Mulligan also is a good singer and an admirable man-

British Public Scoffs at German Claims That a British Cruiser Was Sunk, But Amsterdam Despatches Say Trawler Captain Saw a British Vessel Damaged—Gen. Frey Sends Congratulations.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—From information received here it is believed that the German fleet defeated Sunday was headed for Hull, bent upon wholesale destruction.

Its smart and effective interception by the British squadrons doubtless saved Hull from immense destruction such as the big German vessels are capable of giving. The British navy has, indeed, saved England from day of genuine mourning. Half-hour's freedom in firing on Hull would doubtless mean the loss of thousands of civilians' lives.

England is growing with pleasure over the splendid victory German claims of having sunk a British battleship are scoffed at. The British Admiralty apparently had warning from somewhere as to the coming of the Germans and was ready.

That one of the British warships engaged in the North Sea battle with the German fleet on Sunday morning was damaged, though not seriously by the German fire was reported by the master of the Dutch steam trawler Erica, which has just arrived at Ymuiden, according to a report received by the Central News from a correspondent at Amsterdam who passed without comment by the British censor.

The master of the Erica says that at 9.30 o'clock on Sunday morning while the crew of the trawler was fishing 120 miles from Heligoland they suddenly heard firing.

They saw a German squadron, consisting of six large ships and 22 torpedo-boats, being pursued by a British fleet, which opened fire.

Says the captain of the Erica: "We soon saw a German battleship sink. The Germans retired, fighting as they ran. They were able to damage, though not seriously, one of the British ships."

"The German fleet was soon out of sight, the British pursuing them. The shelling was very heavy during the fight. Projectiles fell like rain and great columns of water were seen rising in the air."

Lord Fisher, First Sea Lord of the Admiralty, yesterday received hundreds of congratulations on the anniversary of his birth. He is in perfect health.

BERLIN, Jan. 26.—The following official announcement on the naval engagement in the North Sea Sunday was given out in Berlin yesterday:

"During the advance of our armored cruisers Seydlitz, Derfflinger, Moltke and Blucher, which, accompanied by four smaller cruisers and two flotillas of torpedo-boats, were steaming in the North Sea, these vessels became engaged with a British detachment composed of five battleships, several smaller cruisers and 26 torpedo-boat destroyers."

"The enemy discontinued the engagement after three hours' time, at a point 70 miles west-northwest of Heligoland, and retreated."

"According to the information available, one British battle cruiser and one of our armored cruisers, the Blucher, were sunk. All the other German ships returned to port."

U. S. Will Not Buy Ships Until Transfers Are Recognized.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—The debate on the Administration ship purchase bill in the Senate yesterday disclosed the fact that it was not the intention of the President to buy the interned ships of any belligerent until he had received assurances through diplomatic channels from the enemies of the country from which such ships might be found that the transfers would be recognized.

Statements to this effect by Senator Simmons, who is one of the President's special representatives in the Senate, and Senator Williams of Mississippi demolished the foundations upon which Senator Root yesterday and Senator Lodge last week built their arguments that the enactment of the bill into law and the operation of these ships under sanction of the Government would involve this Government in grave international complications.

Senator Elihu Root, in the course of his speech in the afternoon, said:

"None of these great powers will permit citizens of an enemy to rob them of their trade by transferring ships they are entitled to capture on the high seas to a neutral flag," he insisted. "We cannot measure the number of our steps. One unneutral step will lead to further unneutral steps by others until we are in the thing."

"I am not arguing against buying a ship, but buying an international quarrel with every ship. If we are to maintain neutrality we must hold close to it. If you precipitate this country into an international controversy when Europe may feel that we have taken sides, we will rend ourselves. The only safe course is to keep out of such controversies."

First Death Claim Paid.

TORONTO, Jan. 26.—The first death claim under the new Workmen's Compensation Act was settled yesterday by the forwarding of the first check. The widow of Charles Potasso, of Cornwall, was paid $24.75, an amount estimated at 55 per cent. of the average monthly wage of her husband, who was killed recently in the course of employment.

There are now six children in the Potasso family, all under the age of 16 years. Compensation allowed them ceases automatically as they reach that age, and the allowance to the widow necessarily decreases.

GARRISON IS ISOLATED

French Have Destroyed Bridges in Rear of St. Mihiel.

Germans Claim That They Have Inflicted Heavy Loss on the Alpine Chasseurs in Alsace — Kaiser's Birthday To Be Celebrated By a Zeppelin Raid—Tentons Ordered To Take Thann.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—Completion of the destruction of the German bridges crossing the Meuse at St. Mihiel, claimed by the French, and inflicting of heavy losses on the Alpine Chasseurs in the fighting in Alsace, claimed by Berlin, are outstanding features of the official reports received in London yesterday from the western front.

The French guns got the range of the German bridge positions last Friday and since then have been hammering them effectively with the result announced yesterday.

Unless the Meuse freezes or the Germans, in the face of a violent fire from the French batteries, which now have the range perfectly, are able to replace the pontoon structures, the garrison will be entirely cut off from the east bank.

Simultaneously British troops, who are now holding the destroyed village of St. Georges, debouched from their position and captured part of the German defensive line to the east and established themselves on ground of great strategic value. Meanwhile the Franco-Belgian forces to the east of Lombardzyde are steadily pushing the Germans back, and with the support of the advanced position of the British to the south are in a position to press forward still more rapidly because the danger of being outflanked is removed.

Of surpassing interest is the reported plan of the Germans to make a spectacular raid by Zeppelins from Bruges on the Kaiser's birthday anniversary on Wednesday. Orders have been issued to the allies' air corps to be prepared to repel airship raiders on the Flanders' front, and particularly in Paris. Each of two new-type dirigibles, reported transported secretly from Friedrichshafen, is equipped with 60 bombs, and each carries a hydro-aeroplane as a scout craft, with a special platform on which aviators may alight.

Artillery duels of great violence are reported all along the western front by both the German and French staffs.

By order of the Kaiser, Thann has to be taken at any cost, and William II. has sent his second son there to see that it is done. That probably accounts for the extremely heavy fighting taking place as a result of the German advance from Uffholtz on Steinbach and Hill No. 425, and the advance on Hartmanns-Weiler Hill, possession of which will enable them to approach Thann from the rear.

The French hold the crest and a portion of the wooded sides of the hill, and the fighting has been hand-to-hand in the battles in the forests. The positions have been elaborately prepared by the Germans, and the French effort to dislodge them from the sides of the mountain is progressing very slowly indeed.

Both the French and the German attach sentimental as well as strategic interest to the possession of Thann. It was here that the former set up the first administrative institutions in the new France, and now the Kaiser has set his heart on getting back the little provincial town.

NEW MOVE IS LIKELY

Germans Will Try to Divert Russians From Bukowina.

Von Hindenburg's Armies Are Presenting a Stubborn Resistance on Left Bank of the Vistula Before Warsaw, While on Right Bank of River Farther North Russians Are Gaining Ground.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 26.—On the left bank of the Vistula the Germans are presenting a stubborn resistance, while on the right bank, in northern Poland, the Russians are pushing the German lines back. In southern Poland the Austrians are showing renewed activity, with German reinforcements strengthening their lines. A new offensive movement is looked for in this region with the object of compelling the Russians to turn their attention from Bukowina and Transylvania.

In southern Galicia the Russians are holding the passes through the Carpathians, where cold and snow have virtually stopped all operations.

The Russians in Poland have the strictest orders not to endanger the grand strategy plan by a premature advance anywhere, however tempting an opportunity may offer itself. These orders have been operative ever since the Germans entered Poland for the second time. A predetermined point beyond which the Germans must on no account be allowed to penetrate was plainly laid down. To that predetermined line the Russian forces which were west of it with one exception, retired fighting. A certain gallant corps held its ground against three German corps, inflicting very fearful losses, but also losing very heavily itself. The Germans could not with their utmost efforts dislodge this stubborn corps, and remnants still held their ground when the German attacks had been crushed.

The official Government organ yesterday takes exception to a statement by the London newspapers which places the losses during the second invasion of Poland at only 370,000 men, 220,000 being Germans. This is little more than half truth.

"I telegraphed you on Dec. 20, says The London Post correspondent, that the losses of three weeks of fighting exceeded half a million men. In point of fact, they were semi-officially put at 600,000 over the whole front of 450 miles from the Baltic to the Rumanian frontier. The German lost over 200,000 on the Bzura alone in these three weeks. In one single spot on this small section of the front on a single night the Germans lost 7,000 killed. This section was not over a mile in length and though the losses here, perhaps, are given as the maximum, yet it must not be forgotten that we have to reckon the losses on 179 other days and nights over the whole 450 miles of front."

The sudden stiffening of the Austrian front in the eleventh hour, to check the Russian invasion of Hungary as a natural sequence of the occupation of Bukowina, seems for the present to be the event of chief military importance. The Russians seem to recognize this and all recent despatches from Petrograd have emphasized the Austro-German offensive in the southeastern theatre.

A SOLAR ECLIPSE. When Totality Occurs Nature Takes on an Awesome Aspect.

A total eclipse of the sun is a wonderful sight. Where the eclipse is but partial the disk of the moon will creep across the face of the sun little by little, but will never completely obscure the orb. But where "totality" occurs the sun at a given moment will be entirely obliterated and the inhabitants of the regions across which the black band will stretch will perceive the most wonderful phenomenon known to astronomers—the display of the "corona" of the sun.

Great waves of incandescent gas hundreds of thousands of miles long, reaching out from the sun into the ether, will be perceived. The countryside will take on a sinister, night gray color, and tints of nature will pale and deaden as at twilight, the temperature will diminish sensibly, the birds, believing night has come, will cease their song and seek their nests. Britain Will Stop Ship.

LONDON, Jan. 26. — Unless a positive guarantee is given that the cargo of foodstuffs on the American steamer Wilhelmina, which sailed from New York Friday for Germany, will not reach the German army, it is likely the ship will be stopped by the allies. Because of the alleged general practice of the German authorities in seizing for military use any foodstuffs, it is stated that the British officials would not regard the consignment of the food ship to some individual or firm any proof that its ultimate destination is not the army.

Under the conditions that are alleged to exist in Germany, it is believed here that it is virtually impossible to guarantee that any foodstuffs destined for civilian use will reach the consignees.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 26. — The British air raid last week on the town of Essen resulted in the destruction of 400 war automobiles, according to a correspondent of The Handelblad. These cars were in a machine shop which was wrecked by the British bombs.

The loss of this large shop and its elaborate equipment, the correspondent continues, has been a serious blow, and the Germans have been compelled to take over a private automobile factory at Aix-la-Chapelle, where hundreds of Dutch workmen have obtained employment.

Princess Patricias Were Within Forty Yards of German Trenches.

LONDON, Jan. 26. — It is reported that the following members of the Princess Patricia's Regiment are sick in hospital at Boulogne: Sergt. Edwin Gordon Brock, Privates Bennett Proudfoot, Fred Warner, Geo. Brock, and Bernard Gallagher.

Stories that the regiment has been again under artillery and rifle fire within forty yards of the German trenches are current. They may refer to the actions previously recorded. Col. Farquhar is quoted as saying that the men behaved magnificently under fire. He himself has had a narrow escape, a German bullet grazing one of his ears. A story from the front is to the effect that one of the Canadian soldiers in the regiment, with a bad body wound, caused by a shot, sang "The Maple Leaf" while the doctors were dressing his injury.

Frank Gillen, of 192 Harvie avenue, Toronto, a member of the police force, sustained an internal injury while engaged in a close-range fight. It is said that the bullet, that wounded Sergt.-Major Bradle of Toronto in the nose killed Le-Corpl. Bellinger of Ottawa (whose death has already been recorded), and who was near him.

In addition to Captain Cuthbert Smith and Major McKinney, Edmonton, already mentioned as invalided to England, Lieut. Philip Cornish and Sergt.-Major Dames of the Patricias have also been invalided.

Lieuts. Stewart, Halifax, and Papi-neau, Quebec, who were injured when their tent was burned down while the Patricias were at Winchester, have fully recovered and have left England with fifty men to reinforce the regiment.

Germany Tries To Conserve Food—

Fifty-Year-Old Men Called.

BERLIN, Jan. 26. — All stocks of wheat have been seized by the German Government, according to the official statement, in order to safeguard the bread supply until the next harvest. This measure, it is said, was made necessary by the fact that the people have failed to economize. The stocks will be distributed according to the population of the various communities.

In the Province of Brandenburg, in which Berlin is located, there have been called upon for medical examination the 50-year-old untrained men of the Landsturm of the 1886, 1887 and 1888 classes.

most wonderful phenomenon known to astronomers—the display of the "corona" of the sun.

Great waves of incandescent gas hundreds of thousands of miles long, reaching out from the sun into the ether, will be perceived. The countryside will take on a sinister, night gray color, and tints of nature will pale and deaden as at twilight, the temperature will diminish sensibly, the birds, believing night has come, will cease their song and seek their nests. A person who has never seen this strange manifestation of nature cannot form any idea of its awesome aspect.

This eclipse is a recurring phenomenon. At the end of every period of eighteen years and eleven days the moon comes between the earth and the sun at just such an angle that the sun's light is completely shut off from a portion of the world and partially shut off from a much larger part.—New York World.

A BILLION DOLLARS.

The Time It Would Take an Expert to Count Them Singly.

I wonder if we realize when we talk of a billion dollars what an enormous sum of money it means?

We all know how rapidly an expert counter of coins will manipulate them. You can scarcely follow the motion of his fingers as he shifts the coins from one pile to another and counts them. The treasury experts will count 4,000 silver dollars in an hour and keep it up all day long, but that is their limit.

Working eight hours a day, then, an expert counter of coins will count 32,000 silver dollars in a day, but how long will it take him at that rate to count $1,000,000? Thirty-one days.

But that is only the beginning of the measurements of great figures, for if this same man were to go on counting silver dollars at the same rate of speed for ten years he would find that he had only counted 100,000,000 of them and that to count $1,000,000,000 would require 102 years of steady work at the rate of eight hours a day during every working day of every one of the 102 years.—O. P. Austin, Former Chief of Bureau of Statistics.

Wind and the Sun.

Wind does not always go down with the sun, but may blow from high to low after sunset. If wind starts to fill up a low pressure area before sunset it is liable to keep pouring in until it is filled and equilibrium restored. If wind stops exactly at instant of sunset one may rest assured that the area of barometrical depression is filled. If wind blows from sea to land by day it may stop at sunset and reverse direction. If it does the cause is that at sunrise the sun's radiant energy heats the land more than it does the water. The land warms the air, increases its rarity, and it rises, producing a lower pressure area, and cooler air from over the ocean rushes in to fill it. After sunset land cools in less time than the water, and the direction of flow is reversed. But this may not always occur. Local causes, as fog, saturation of air, electrical conditions and others may prevent.—New York Journal.

ONTARIO POLITICS

Conservative temperance men are beginning to express frankly their approval of Mr. Rowell's proposal to co-operate with the Government in closing all social drinking places during the progress of the war and at the conclusion of the war to submit to the people on a majority vote the question of whether these places are to be re-opened or not.

Mr. A. R. Williams, for example, head of the A. R. Williams Machinery Company, and a well-known Toronto Conservative, says, "Mr. Rowell's proposal is simply splendid. It shows once more that he is perfectly willing to share with the Government the great honor of making a substantial temperance advance. It shows that he is not moved by political motives but by a genuine desire for temperance reform."

"I agree with him thoroughly that some definite and decisive move should be made to curtail the liquor traffic during the progress of the war. I cannot see how the Government can refuse Mr. Rowell's offer to co-operate with them in doing something which would bring so much good to the Province of Ontario."

Ex-Alderman James Hales, another Conservative, says, "I very cordially approve of Mr. Rowell's proposal. Indeed I should like to see our legislators go a good deal further and entirely prohibit the traffic which makes men unfit and does them no good whatever. The people of Ontario have a right to expect their legislators to be as alert and progressive as the legislators of Russia."

FEDERAL ASSISTANCE TO HORSE BREEDING.

The progress that has been attained in the past in Canadian horse breeding has been due largely to individual effort. To the few who have done so much for the advancement of the industry every credit is due. Through the lack, however, of concerted action and co-operative measures on a large scale amongst the breeders, the business has not progressed as rapidly as could be desired.

The want of proper organization, except in the more favored districts, has prevented the farmers generally from securing and retaining the services of good breeding sires. In a majority of sections, breeders wishing to grade up their horses are forced to use whatever stallions may, by chance, stand for service in their district. Many of these are faulty in conformation and lack in quality, payment to community organizations of a part of the service fee will, it is expected, give a permanent stimulus to the hiring of the best stallions that may be procured and at the same time, promote the development of a comprehensive movement in the interests of this important national industry.

Stated briefly, the scheme is as follows: The farmers of any district, wishing to work for the betterment of Horse Breeding, by encouraging the use of sound, individually excellent pure bred sires may form a 'Breeders' Club for the purpose of hiring a pure bred stallion for the benefit of the members. These Breeders' Clubs, by organizing under and adopting the Constitution and By-laws and conforming to the various Rules and Regulations governing this grant may participate in the Federal Assistance given to such Clubs. This consists in paying practically 25 per cent. of the service fees on a guaranteed number of mares.

THE EXCEPTION.

With a view to encourage the breeding of Remounts, the portion paid by the Live Stock Branch to Clubs hiring suitable Thoroughbred stallions shall be 40 per cent. on all mares except thoroughbred mares. For the booklet on Federal Assistance and all other information address the Dominion Live Stock Commissioner, Ottawa, Canada.

The Way to Become a True Christian.

Hungry Souls Ask For Bread of Life—Indigestible Stones and Fetid Errors Repel—Only the Bread From Heaven Truly Satisfies—God's True Message Delicious, Satisfying—Error Led To Error.

(PASTOR RUSSELL)

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 17.—Pastor Russell preached here to-day at Macauley's Theatre. We report his discourse from the text, "Present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable to God, and your reasonable service."—Romans 12:1.

Repeatedly the Pastor meets with people inquiring for the Bread of Life. These seem to know that there is something radically wrong with nominal church preaching. They tell that they are importuned for money; but that when they ask for soul food, they meet with evasion and subterfuge from many of the great and learned, who seem to have lost sight of the Bible and heart-conversion. Or they are met by the Salvation Army with traditions as indigestible as a stone. They are told that God created our race with full knowledge that nearly all of them would spend eternity in torture; and that to be saved from that awful fate they should become Salvationists, and storm the slums for Jesus.

This eternal-torture error drives away from God and the Bible our most intelligent people, who are repelled with the thought that the Creator would pursue a course which would be beneath the instincts of the most degraded. The Bible declares such fallacies to be "doctrines of demons." It was a master stroke on Satan's part to so misrepresent God as to repel those desiring to draw near Him.

But to tell the people the Truth is to anger the clergy; for it proves them to be in the wrong. Instead of building up the House of God, they have built meeting-houses—seeking numbers and popularity rather than instructing the people in God's Word. Remarkably few church members, he finds, know what or why they believe. They give very little evidence of having the fruits of the Holy Spirit, and many of them manifest the fruits of the Evil Spirit—"anger, malice, hatred, envy, strife, bitterness, slander," etc., which the Apostles style works of the flesh and of the Devil.—Matthew 7:20; Galatians 5:17-21; 1 John 3:8.

The speaker admitted that there are nice people connected with all denominations. He complimented their education, refinement, wealth, influence and humanitarian sympathies, but showed that all these belong to people who are not church members. Participation in good work is by no means a proof that one is a Christian. A Christian is a person who has come into a very special relationship to God through Christ.

In all kindness the Pastor declared that according to Bible standards the vast majority of church members and of preachers are not Christians at all. Then he thanked God that this does

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, Jan. 25.—Decided tension on the buying side and a falling off in the stock on hand at the principal domestic centres helped to keep up the price of wheat today to the highest record yet during the European war—$1.46 1-2 a bushel. May, The market closed unsettled at 3-4c to 11-16c above Saturday night. Corn gained 1-4c 1-2c and oats 1-8c to 3-4c. The outcome in provisions varied from 5c decline to a rise of 21-2c.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 25.—Wheat and oats opened at new record prices this morning. May was sold at $1.43 1/4, and July at $1.44 1/4, which showed an advance over Saturday's close of 1/4c to 1/2c. Oats were 1/4c to 1/2c up and flax was up 1c to 2c. Further advances took place on wheat and oats, while flax held steady.

Reports were current again today that the government were buying; further large contracts were said to be carried thru in addition to those of Saturday.

Broomhall's estimate of only 36,000,000 bushels exportable surplus from the Argentine, as against official estimates of Jan. 2 of 73,000,000, had an influence. Spot wheat at Liverpool being 1 1/4d higher for No. 2 Manitoba influenced wheat. Cash markets were quiet, exporters not being inclined to buy unless in fairly large offerings. Further export sales were claimed to be worked today.

Inspections 141 cars, as against 145 last year, and in sight 220. Futures closed 1/4c to 1c higher, cash 1/4c to 1 1/4c up for wheat, oats 1/4c higher and flax 1/4c to 2 1/4c up.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Jan. 25.—The overseas demand for Manitoba spring wheat was fairly good, but owing to the strength in the Winnipeg market and the fact that the prices bid were practically the same as Saturday's, exporters would not accept them and business was quiet. On the other hand there was an active trade done in coarse grains on spot including sales of 200,000 bushels oats and 30,000 American No. 3 mixed corn. The tone of the market for oats is strong and higher prices are expected in the near future. There was no change in flour, for which there continues to be a steady demand on domestic account, but the export trade is quiet.

Through the lack, however, of concerted action and co-operative measures on a large scale amongst the breeders, the business has not progressed as rapidly as could be desired.

The want of proper organization, except in the more favored districts, has prevented the farmers generally from securing and retaining the services of good breeding sires. In a majority of sections, breeders wishing to grade up their horses are forced to use whatever stallions may, by chance, stand for service in their district. Many of these are faulty in conformation and lack in quality, while others, though of better type, remain, either through insufficient patronage or because of failures to leave coats, but a single season in each district. The fact also that there has been no systematic adherence to the use of one breed suggests another reason for the lack of progress in the breeding of high class animals.

It must be recognized further, that the owner of a valuable horse, after paying for maintenance, insurance, interest on investment and the expense entailed in the collection of his fees, has frequently little left from his outlay, particularly in districts where he has to compete with grade and scrub stallions standing for service at a very low fee. As a result, really high class stallions can be maintained only in districts where the breeding of horses has been given serious and progressive attention.

In view of these considerations, the Minister of Agriculture proposes to enter upon a policy which may serve to place the horse breeding industry in Canada in a position comparable to that which it has attained in Great Britain and other European countries. It is believed that by encouraging the organization of breeders' clubs and by enabling such clubs to procure the services of good breeding stallions under favorable financial conditions, the assistance in this direction can best be provided. The encouragement of community breeding will, naturally, of itself, be productive of useful results. The

WELLINGTON'S NOSE.

The Greatest Compliment Ever Paid the Iron Duke.

A favorite story of the Duke of Wellington—if not his most favorite story—concerned an incident which happened during the Peninsular wars when, to quote his own words, "my looks were of great use to me."

After the army passed from Spain into France, and occupied the low plains at the northern foot of the Pyrenees, the duke directed Lord Hill to take up a position at a short distance from the main body, across one of the many streams in that locality. The water was very low, and easily fordable at the time; but during the night a very heavy rain came on. The next day the stream was nine or ten feet deep, and Lord Hill, with only a few thousand men, was in dangerous proximity to Marshal Soult's whole army.

Nothing was heard of Lord Hill during the whole day, for his position evidently had not been discovered by the French. On the following morning the duke became anxious. He determined to cross over himself to ascertain the state of affairs, and a small boat was procured. The duke got into it and remained standing. The stream was very narrow, but deep, and the boat touched the opposite bank, close to where an Irish sentry was posted. The man challenged the party, who could not give the countersign, on which Pat leveled his musket to fire at them. Looking along the barrel he recognized the commander-in-chief just as his grace stepped on shore. He immediately brought his musket to the salute and, with the greatest good humor, called out, "God bless your craegid (crooked) nose! I'd sooner see it than ten thousand min."

The duke used to finish his story by adding, "And I protest that that is the greatest personal compliment ever paid me in the whole course of my life."

Barber a Man of Strength.

"I suppose that most people," said a barber, "would consider plying the shears and razor as comparatively easy work; they would not expect to find barbers men of muscle."

"The fact is that standing all day and even in the easier parts of his work using his arms all day in various positions the barber keeps his muscles in constant exercise, while in such operations as shampooing and massage he is called upon for the exertion of downright strength."

"He may not have the muscle of a man always in strict training, but I think you would find that, as a rule, the barber is no weakling."

John 3:8.

The speaker admitted that there are nice people connected with all denominations. He complimented their education, refinement, wealth, influence and humanitarian sympathies, but showed that all these belong to people who are not church members. Participation in good work is by no means a proof that one is a Christian. A Christian is a person who has come into a very special relationship to God through Christ.

In all kindness the Pastor declared that according to Bible standards the vast majority of church members and of preachers are not Christians at all. Then he thanked God that this does not mean that the Bible condemns them to eternal torment. But these self-deceived ones will have no part in the wonderful blessings Divinely provided for the elect Church—saintly persons of all denominations, "whose names are written in Heaven."

Surrender Self—Sacrifice To God. According to Scripture no human being is fit for eternal life, because all are sinners. Father Adam's sin cut him off from God; and his race has deteriorated. But God has provided for man's recovery from his present deplorable state, and has set a time for the recovery—Messiah's Millennial Kingdom.

Meantime a special Call has gone forth for an elect Church, to be Christ's Joint-heir in the kingdom. Few have heard the Message, and still fewer believe it. For nearly nineteen centuries it has been going hither and thither, quietly, unostentatively. The world and the nominal churches would say that it had accomplished nothing—that everything had been accomplished by them. But the speaker prefers to stand by the Bible and to recognize that God's consecrated ones have indeed lifted up a light that the world has hated—a light on account of which they have frequently been put to death, or had their names cast out as evil, or been boycotted, socially or otherwise.

If their hopes were merely in the present life, these would be making a miserable failure of their opportunities. But not so; they "walk by faith, and not by sight." They await their future reward—at the Second Coming of Jesus—by a share in His, the First Resurrection. Even now their peace, joy and fellowship with God more than offset their trials, difficulties and ostracism.

To be a disciple of Christ is to be a pupil—one who walks as He walked. The proposition is self-denial, self-effacement. It means giving one's self wholly to God, as declared in our text. No one need go far to make this consecration. Each, at his own bedside, can give himself to God. But unless we take this step, and definitely and positively enter into a contract with the Lord, we have neither lot nor part with Him.

We are still of the world, however much we may wish and try to pattern our lives after decent models and to avoid the grosser and the finer sins. The covenant with the Lord is the beginning, and to each covenant comes "grace to help in every time of need"; as Jesus said, "without Me ye can do nothing."

A Natural Question.

Our small daughter is very fond of her bath, writes a contributor to Harper's Magazine, but she objects vigorously to the drying process.

One day, while we were remonstrating with her, she said: "Why, what would happen, mamma, if you didn't wipe me dry? Would I get rusty?"

OWES HER LIFE TO "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Cured Both Stomach Trouble and Headaches

PALMERSTON, ONT., JUNE 20th, 1913.

"I really believe that I owe my life to 'Fruit-a-tives'. Ever since childhood, I have been under the care of physicians and have been paying doctor's bills. I was so sick and worn out that people on the street often asked me if I thought I could get along without help. The same old Stomach Trouble and distressing Headaches nearly drove me wild. Sometime ago, I got a box of 'Fruit-a-tives' and the first box did me good. My husband was delighted and advised a continuation of their use.

Today, I am feeling fine, and a physician meeting me on the street, noticed my improved appearance and asked the reason. I replied, 'I am taking Fruit-a-tives'. He said, 'Well, if Fruit-a-tives are making you look so well, go ahead and take them. They are doing more for you than I can'."

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 25.—Wheat and oats opened at new record prices this morning. May was sold at $1.43 1/2, and July at $1.44 1/2, which showed an advance over Saturday's close of 1/2c to 3/4c. Oats were 1/2c to 3/4c up and flax was up 1c to 1 1/2c. Further advances took place on wheat and oats, while flax held steady.

Reports were current again today that the government were buying; further contracts were said to be carried over in addition to those of Saturday.

Roomhall's estimate of only 36,000,000 bushels exportable surplus from the Argentine, as against official estimates on Jan. 2 of 73,000,000, had an influence. Spot heat at Liverpool being 1 1/4d higher for No. 2 Manitoba influenced wheat. Cash markets were quiet, exporters not being inclined to buy unless in fairly large quantities. Further export sales were aimed to be worked today.

Inspections 141 cars, as against 145 last year, and in sight 220. Futures closed 1/2c higher, cash 1/2c to 1 1/4c up for wheat, 1/2c higher and flax 1/2c to 2 1/4c up.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Jan. 25.—The overseas demand for Manitoba spring wheat was fairly good, but owing to the strength in the Winnipeg market and the fact that the prices bid were practically the same as Saturday's, exporters would not accept them and business was quiet. On the other hand there was an active trade done in coarse grains on spot including sales of 200,000 bushels oats and 30,000 American No. 3 mixed corn. The tone of the market for oats is strong and higher prices are expected in the near future. There was no change in flour, in which there continues to be a steady demand on domestic account, at the export trade is quiet.

Butter was active and firm. Cheese

REMARKABLE CASE of Mrs. HAM

Declares Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Saved Her Life and Sanity.

Shamrock, Mo.—“I feel it my duty to tell the public the condition of my health before using your medicine. I had falling, inflammation and congestion, female weakness, pains in both sides, backaches and bearing down pains, was short of memory, nervous, impatient, passed sleepless nights, and had neither strength nor energy. There was always a fear and dread in my mind, I had cold, nervous, weak spells, hot flashes over my body. I had a place in my right side that was so sore that I could hardly bear the weight of my clothes. I tried medicines and doctors, but they did me little good, and I never expected to get out again. I got Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier, and I certainly would have been in grave or in an asylum if your medicines had not saved me. But now I can work all day, sleep well at night, eat anything I want, have no hot flashes or weak, nervous spells. All pains, aches, fears and dreads are gone, my house, children and husband are no longer neglected, as I am almost entirely free of the bad symptoms I had before taking your remedies, and all is pleasure and happiness in my home.”—Mrs. JOSIE HAM, R. F. D. 1, Box 22, Shamrock, Missouri.

Sometimes Happens So.

The family had gone off for their holiday in a taxi. Twenty minutes later the taxi snored back up the road.

“Forgotten the tickets?” cried a neighbor.

“No,” said the irate householder, “but my wife’s just remembered that she’s left a kettle boiling on the gas stove.”

He dived into the house and came back the next moment with a ghastly calm on his face.

“All right now?” said the neighbor cheerily.

“Right! I’d forgotten that I’d turned the gas off at the meter, and now we’ve two hours and a half to wait for the next train.”—Glasgow Dispatch.

Father of the Dreadnought.

To the late Admiral Cuniberti, member of the Italian naval engineering staff, is due the credit of having suggested the modern Dreadnought. It was he, also, who suggested the modern type of scout, and he was one of the first to study the question of the application of liquid fuel to marine boilers. It was his influence which led to the adoption of this fuel in the Italian torpedo boat service.

Making Sure of Her Sleep.

“I knew you were coming tonight to call on my sister,” said dear little Jimmy.

“How did you know?” inquired Mr. Nevergo.

“Because sis has been asleep all the afternoon.”

Encouraging.

Young Man—So Miss Ethel is your eldest sister. Who comes after her?

Small Brother—Nobody ain’t come yet, but pa says the first fellow that comes can have her.

Love in itself is not joy; it is always service, and it may be a sacrifice; it means giving, not receiving—asking, not answering.

Read Character by the Tongue.

The “science” of glossomancy consists in reading people’s characters by the shape and size of the tongue. Thus, according to glossomancists, a long tongue shows frankness, a short one dissimulation, a broad one unreservedness, a narrow one concentration, a long and broad tongue inclination to gossip, a long and narrow one frankness. Those who possess short and broad tongues are untruthful; those whose tongues are short and narrow are sly as well as bad tempered. Hold out your tongue!

Safety First.

“The doctor says there are more white corpuscles in my blood than red ones.”

“Well, what are you going to do about it?”

“Nothing. If I had more red corpuscles in my blood I might go around looking for trouble. As it is, I’m content to let trouble look for me.”

A Bird of a Retort.

“Here you are,” scolded the robin, “putting your egg in my nest and expecting my wife and me to hatch it. You have a mighty bad reputation for your irregular habits.”

“Oh, I don’t know,” saucily replied the cuckoo. “I never heard of any clocks being named after you.”

of the bowels is an absolute necessity for good health. Unless the waste matter from the food which collects there is got rid of at least once a day, it decays and poisons the whole body, causing biliousness, indigestion and sick headaches. LETTER FROM A CANADIAN

Divisional Signal Coy.
Enford, Jan. 6th, 1915.

Women's Patriotic Service and Red Cross Work

Through the Daughters of the Empire.

MORE LETTERS FROM SOLDIERS AT SALISBURY PLAIN.

Additional letters of thanks have been received by our workers in acknowledgement of "comforts" received, which proved most acceptable.

SUPPLIES FOR NORTHERN FRANCE.

Preparations are going forward to respond to the call for the requirements in the north of France. Therefore, all workers and friends of the Committee having old linen or cotton are requested to bring same to our room in the Harshaw Block. Linen or cotton insufficiently strong to bear the strain for bandaging will answer for pads, or other purposes. Lieut.-Col. Hodgetts directions will be followed in the disposition of these supplies.

WORK MEETINGS AND TEAS.

Our weekly work meetings will continue every Thursday afternoon, at which we are glad to welcome all our friends. In conjunction with the above the Committee have organized a series of Allies teas. These were very appropriately inaugurated on Thursday last, with Great Britain, Britannia Day being held. This was most fitting in every way, especially so, in view of our recent glorious naval victory.

A Tea for each Allied Country and the British Isles with attractive features, will be held on succeeding Thursdays.

THE BELGIANS.

Supplies are still requested for these suffering people. Anyone having what is required for them, will greatly oblige the Committee by sending it in. Our work-room will be open also on Saturday afternoons from 2 to 5.30 o'clock.

The Red Cross Society

A letter has been received from Mr. H. E. Harcourt, Vernon, thanking the Napanee Branch for the handsome donation of $617.24. In addition to this cash contribution we have this week forwarded to headquarters in Toronto, 145 pairs of socks, 49 pairs of wristlets, 48 flannel shirts, 5 Balacava caps, 2 pairs of mittens and 9 cholera bands.

The work rooms will be open Saturday morning and afternoon as usual and all who can assist in rolling bandages or making hospital supplies will be gladly welcomed. Afternoon Tea will be served.

The Ladies of the "Cutting Out" committee will give a Valentine Tea Friday evening, February 12th, of

TAMWORTH CONTINUATION SCHOOL LITERARY SOCIETY

The semi-annual elections in the C. S. Literary Society were held Friday last, nominations having been held two weeks earlier. For every office there was a contest and most cases a three-cornered fight. The campaign was an interesting one, a thorough canvass being made. (Of a possible 58 votes, 55 were polled but one of these was subsequently ruled out by the returning officer spoiled. Mr. Thos. M. Donovan returning officer and Mr. N. Barnes his poll clerk. Printed ballots were supplied and the ordinary rules of a polling booth adhered to. Ten of the candidates were either present themselves or represented agents. The following were elected President—Florence Carscallen, majority 4.

Vice-Pres.—Irene Whalen, maj. 12.
Sec.-Treas.—Elsie Jones, maj. 12.

I. O. D. E.

The 22nd day of January being "Violet Day," Mrs. A. L. Harsh received the members of the U.E. Chapter of the I.O.D.E., at her residence, Piety Hill. An invitation was also extended to the ladies who have been assisting with the work for soldiers, and a splendid gathering was held. The hostess, who received, was assisted by the first Vice Regent, Mrs. J. H. Madden.

The afternoon was given over to a program of great interest, prepared by Mrs. J. G. Daly, and the ladies listened with enjoyment to the following numbers: A sketch of the girlhood and young ladyhood of Queen Victoria, which was most appropriate as "Violet Day" commemorates the death of "Victoria the Good," splendidly rendered recitation, to delightful solos and the chorus ladies who sang the National Anthem of the Allies, were all appreciated. The feature of the afternoon was a paper written and read by Mrs. G. Wilson. As Mrs. Wilson stated, it is the custom of the Chapter to exact a toll from every member who "strays too far from home" and it was with great interest that everyone present listened to Mrs. Wilson's magic recitation of Florence. The program completed, tea was served in the usual dainty way and a social hour was passed most delightfully.

LETTER FROM A CANADIAN
Divisional Signal Coy,
Enford, Jan. 6th, 1915.
Mr. E. J. Pollard,
Napanee Ont.

Dear Sir:—Just a line to thank you for the paper which you send me. I am sorry I have been unable to thank you before as we have been pretty busy lately, having moved our quarters from West Down South Camp to this village, where we stay in a racing stable. I enjoy your paper very much as any news from home is very welcome.
We are having a bad time of it here just now, as the great rains have swollen the river to such an extent as to cause it to overflow its banks so that everything is under a foot or two of water. The people say they never saw so much rain or so bad a flood for twenty-five years. Our grounds and the streets are small rivers, so there is little doubt where so many of us get our colds, (and colds seem to be the order of the day.)
Have been on pass to London and a health resort, and from what I have seen I believe I shall like England, but not the country around Salisbury Plain. Have grown bigger and talker since I joined the army, so think the life agrees with me, nevertheless, I like it, for all its ups and downs.
Will say good-bye for now, with many thanks for kindly sending me your paper.
Yours very truly,
Pte. Clarke V. Emmons.

W. C. T. U. ITEMS.
1. Are you satisfied with the present status of the White Ribbon movement in your county? If not, why not? Do you attend all the meetings of the White Ribboners and do you know what is being done? Are you helping in every way possible within your reach and possibilities and duty toward your town and surrounding country?
2. Do you favor an increase in the number of our local unions? Would it not be possible to form some new unions in surrounding country by a small expansion and expression of energy on our part and pass on the good that has been done to us. Perhaps some wife, sister or mother could get the encouraging word that would help to light a stronger battle and become the victor.
3. Do you believe there ought to be more L.I.L.'s? Do you believe we should teach and train the child in ways of thriftiness and sobriety and what are you doing to help your neighbor's child? Are you letting that child grow up as a burdock for you to look at just over the fence all the rest of your days? Better grow flowers.
4. In your opinion would it help the temperance question if our public and high schools were visited and the scientific facts upon which the reform rests, were presented to the pupils?
Edison, the great scientist, is preparing an 8 years course of moving pictures to be used in schools on scientific temperance. Oh for some one or two or three to bring such a mighty weapon to our town.

ONTARIO POLITICS
TO FIGHT GERMAN TAR PRODUCTS.
Most of the coal tar products that have in the past been imported from Germany in large quantities, will in all probability now be made in Canada. It has been discovered that many of them can be obtained as by-product from the lignites found along the Canadian Northern Railway in the Province of Saskatchewan which when properly handled will form one of the main fuel supplies of the Province.
A review of the trade of the past few years, shows that Canada and the United States have been bringing in tar products valued at the point of export at over twelve million dollars, which probably cost double that amount by the time they reached the consumer. Amongst the most important of these commodities are Wood preservatives, paraffin, Anilins dyes and various antiseptics.
Millions of gallons of creosote oils for preserving timber and tie have been imported by Canada and the United States. On account of the decrease in the visible supply of railroad timber, the demand for preservatives is much on the increase and it is only a matter of time before Railways will use nothing but treated ties.
As the German supply is cut off it can readily be understood that this is a golden opportunity for the development of a large trade in these products, which can undoubtedly be obtained from lignite at a lower cost than they are being laid down on the ground at present.
Interests in Regina have been actively engaged for some time in investigating the lignite fields, and their possibilities in conjunction with the Government of the Province, and the active developments of these deposits of excellent fuel has been decided upon. In connection with this operation those undertaking this work intend to invade the open market with their coal tar products, and capture this valuable trade, the control of which in the past has been to a large extent in the hands of the Germans.

Mystery of the Stomach.
"Why does not the stomach digest itself?" is a question often asked. The Journal of the American Medical Association confesses that the reason has not yet been found. There are many theories, but not one of them is entirely satisfactory, and we are still unable to say more than Hunter said more than a century ago, "that these living cells remain intact under such circumstances 'because they are alive.'"—New York World.

FAMWORTH CONTINUATION SCHOOL LITERARY SOCIETY.

The semi-annual elections in the T. S. Literary Society were held on Friday last, nominations having been held two weeks earlier. For every office there was a contest and in most cases a three-cornered fight. The campaign was an interesting one, a thorough canvas being made. Out of a possible 58 votes, 55 were polled out of one of these was subsequently elected by the returning officer as polled. Mr. Thos. M. Donovan was returning officer and Mr. Norris Barnes his poll clerk. Printed ballots were supplied and the ordinary rules of a polling booth adhered to. Ten of the candidates were either present themselves or represented by agents. The following were elected: President—Florence Carscallen, majority 4. Vice-Pres.—Irene Whalen, maj. 14. Sec-Treas.—Elsie Jones, maj. 12. Critic—Agnes Ward, maj. 19. Chairmen of Program Committees—Athleen Barnes, maj. 2, and Reginald Smith, maj. 1.

I. O. D. E.

The 22nd day of January being Violet Day," Mrs. A. L. Harshaw received the members of the U.E.L. chapter of the I.O.D.E., at her residence, Piety Hill. An invitation was so extended to the ladies who have been assisting with the work for the oldsters, and a splendid gathering regarded the hostess, who received, assisted by the first Vice Regent, Mrs. H. Madden. The program was given over to a program of great interest, prepared by Mrs. J. G. Daly, and the ladies listened with enjoyment to the following numbers: A sketch of the girlhood of young ladyhood of Queen Victoria, which was most appropriate, "Violet Day" commemorates the birth of "Victoria the Good." A splendidly rendered recitation, two delightful solos and the chorus of the Allies, were all appreciated. The feature of the afternoon was a paper written and read by Mrs. W. Wilson. As Mrs. Wilson stated, it is the custom of the Chapter to exact toll from every member who "strays so far from home" and it was with great interest that everyone present listened to Mrs. Wilson's magic description of Florence. The program completed, tea was served in the usual dainty way and a social hour as passed most delightfully.

KEEP YOUR TEMPER.

It Will Save Your Heart From a Lot of Unnecessary Strain.

Dr. J. Strickland Goodall, in a recent address before the Institute of Hygiene, illustrated the enormous power of the human heart in a striking way. He told his hearers to take a two pound weight in the palm of the hand, resting the elbow upon a table, and raise and lower it from the level of the elbow to the shoulder. This is exactly the work done by the heart at each beat. Do this about seventy or eighty times a minute and see how long you can keep it up. The heart keeps it up from before birth to just after death, perhaps seventy years. It never takes a rest. It never sleeps.

At each contraction the heart does enough work to lift a two pound weight one foot. The heart of a young and healthy person is almost immune to weariness or strain. But if its muscles be weakened by the accumulation of body poisons or by anaemia it is very easily strained. The heart has been known to break from the strain of sudden emotion. Anger will increase the work of the heart from 152 to 224 foot pounds a minute. Therefore, as the Scientific American says, "Keep your temper" is good physiological advice."

Running to catch a train, running upstairs or any sudden and unusual exertion puts a great extra strain upon the heart. The healthy heart of youth is equal to such strains; not so the heart that has been weakened by disease, dissipation or old age. Dr. Goodall tested the heart of a healthy man before he ran to catch a train; it was beating 76 to the minute and doing 152 foot pounds of work a minute. He tested it immediately after the run; it was beating 180 to the minute and doing 300 foot pounds of work a minute.

VALUE OF ELASTICITY.

Shown in the Sand Blast as Well as in Catching a Ball.

A sand blast consists of a stream of sand and compressed air shot from a nozzle and is used for polishing or cutting hard materials or cleaning paint off metals, etc. It is also used for etching figures on glass. Now the question arises as to what the glass is covered with in those parts that are to remain free from etching.

A thin sheet of rubber is used, it having been found that the sharp sand particles will rebound from the rubber, although cutting deeply into the glass. As rubber is much softer than glass it seems more or less peculiar. The explanation lies in the fact that the sand particles striking the rubber take a longer time to stop than those striking the glass, and it is a law of mechanics that the longer it takes a given body to stop the smaller the force exerted on the object struck.

This is a well known phenomenon in other ways. A player catches a baseball with a backward swing of his hand instead of holding it rigid. The mitt itself allows the ball some time to stop before the stuffing is compressed sufficiently to become rigid. A pair of eyeglasses dropped on a carpet do not break, but do dropped on a cement sidewalk from the same height. They have the same amount of energy to be destroyed by the body that stops them, for they fall from the same height, but the carpet took longer to stop them than the cement.

The same reasoning applies when a

AN OPTICAL ENIGMA.

Why Is It the Human Eye Sees Things Right Side Up?

Just why we are able to see things right side up is a mystery which science has not yet been able to explain.

We know that the human eye involves the same optical principles as a camera. Owing to the fact that light always travels in a straight line and never in a curve, the rays which emanate from any object within our range of vision have to descend and ascend in order to travel into the narrow opening in the eye which corresponds to the camera's lens.

These rays finally reach a point where they intersect. Continuing on in straight lines, their relative position becomes just the reverse of what they were when they left the object seen.

Thus the image register on the retina of your eye is topsy turvy. Just as it is on the photographic plate in a camera. If you are looking at a house, for instance, the image your eye gets will show the chimneys down below, the foundation walls up above, and so on. But the impression your brain gets

SLANG IN ENGLAND.

Expressions Used Here Have a Different Meaning Over There.

If a man meets another man in Piccadilly and says, "Jack is pulling your leg," he means quite a different thing from what a man meeting another man on Broadway would mean. In London he means that Jack is telling his friend some sort of marvelous stories that are not true, but are designed to deceive not for the purpose of profit but for the purpose of making the man appear ridiculous. An American attempting to express the same thought would say: "Jack is kidding you." On the American side of the Atlantic, leg pulling means to exchange a counterfeit fairy tale for some real money.

In the United States, to call a man a "nut" is to imply that he is afflicted with wheels in his cranium, bats in his belfry, or, in other words, to imply that there is nobody home upstairs. In this land of the free and home of the brave a "nut" is a lunatic.

Not so in Britain. Over there to call a man a "nut," especially if he be a young man, is very likely to be a high compliment, for an English "nut" is a

ONTARIO POLITICS

TO FIGHT GERMAN TAR PRODUCTS.

Most of the coal tar products that have in the past been imported from Germany in large quantities, will in probability now be made in Canada. It has been discovered that any of them can be obtained as a by-product from the lignites found along the Canadian Northern Railway in the Province of Saskatchewan, which when properly handled will form one of the main fuel supplies for the Province.

A review of the trade of the past few years, shows that Canada and the United States have been bringing tar products valued at the point of export at over twelve million dollars, which probably cost double at amount by the time they reach the consumer. Amongst the most important of these commodities are food preservatives, paraffin, Aniline and various antiseptics.

Millions of gallons of creosoting oil for preserving timber and ties have been imported by Canada and the United States. On account of the increase in the visible supply of railroad timber, the demand for preservatives is much on the increase, and it is only a matter of time before the Railways will use nothing but creosoted ties.

As the German supply is cut off it is readily understood that this is a golden opportunity for the development of a large trade in these products, which can undoubtedly be obtained from lignite at a lower cost than they are being laid down on the ground at present.

Interests in Regina have been actively engaged for some time in investigating the lignite fields, and their possibilities in conjunction with the Government of the Province, and the active developments of these deposits of excellent fuel has been delayed upon. In connection with this investigation those undertaking this work tend to invade the open market with their coal tar products, and capture this valuable trade, the control of which in the past has been to a large extent in the hands of the Germans.

The same reasoning applies when a man is hit on the jaw and on the fleshy part of the arm with the same amount of force in each blow. Damage is done to the jaw, but not to the arm. Thus, if a fat man be kicked, nothing in the world is hurt but his dignity.—Chicago Herald.

Strange, but True.

"Isn't human nature a funny thing?" said the philosopher at large. "Take the average man when he goes into the wash room of a big hotel or restaurant. If the wash room boys insist upon getting in his way by turning on the water for him, putting a towel in his hands or whiskbrooming him, their sole object of course being to extort a tip, he says to himself, 'What do they think I am, an easy mark?' But if they pay no attention whatever to him, he asks himself, 'What do they think I am, a cheap skate?' Queer, isn't it?"—New York Times.

THE BELL AT LLOYD'S.

Tolls When a Ship is Posted In the Chamber of Horrors.

One of the most interesting of bells is the one at Lloyd's, the great London marine insurance exchange. Its ringing has more significance than the sound of most bells, for it is rung only when a vessel is reported lost or when a ship long overdue and considered lost unexpectedly reaches port.

The bell now used at Lloyd's belonged to the Lutine, which was wrecked near the Zuyder Zee in October, 1790, while taking specie from English merchants to Hamburg.

There is a room at Lloyd's known as the chamber of horrors, and here are posted the telegrams that report casualties at sea. Unimportant accidents are not entered in the loss book, but the most serious are not only entered there, but are cried aloud by an official who stands in gorgeous uniform beneath the sounding board.

When after a week's disappearance it is feared that a vessel has gone down the owners make an application to the committee at Lloyd's to have the ship posted. That is done by posting up a notice in the chamber of horrors which says that the authorities would be glad of information concerning the boat.

A week elapses, and then a second notice is put up, saying that the boat has not since been heard of. When you read that a ship has been "posted" as missing you may know that declaration is upon the notice board at Lloyd's. On that day the insurance money is payable, and all who were upon her are legally considered dead. When a ship is posted the old Lutine bell is tolled once. In the very unusual event of a vessel arriving in port after being posted the bell is struck twice, and the caller makes his announcement from the rostrum amid a breathless silence.—Youth's Companion.

sponds to the camera's lens.

These rays finally reach a point where they intersect. Continuing on in straight lines, their relative position becomes just the reverse of what they were when they left the object seen.

Thus the image register on the retina of your eye is topsy turvy, just as it is on the photographic plate in a camera. If you are looking at a house, for instance, the image your eye gets will show the chimneys down below, the foundation walls up above, and so on.

But the impression your brain gets reveals the house right side up unless you happen to be afflicted with a rare disorder, which results in everything always appearing topsy turvy.

During the infinitesimally short period required to flash the image seen from the eye's retina to the brain all the light rays which created the image are reassembled and put back in their proper places, so that the brain sees the object as it really is and not in the topsy turvy form it was registered on the retina. Just how this miracle is performed is what science would like to find out.—New York American.

GRAVESTONE LUNCHEONS.

One of the Curious Sights of New York's Financial District.

In old Trinity churchyard, where Robert Fulton and Alexander Hamilton lie buried, dozens of girls can be seen through the pickets of the bronze fences every day enjoying their noonday lunches amidst the tombs of the old time New Yorkers. All about are high skyscraping office buildings. The elevated trains clatter and bang overhead, and on Broadway the trolley's gongs add tumult to the roar of the city. Within the old churchyard all is peace and quiet. It is here that the girls from these big office buildings come of a noontime to eat their lunch, "far from the madding crowd," yet within a hand's reach of the bustle of Broadway.

It was only a few years ago that some girl, a typewriter in a nearby office building, chanced to let her eyes fall over the gravestones of old Trinity. They did not bring thoughts of ghosts to her mind—they only made her think that it would be lovely if she could eat her lunch among such peaceful scenes. The next day she and a girl friend brought their lunches. They entered the churchyard and, seeking a secluded spot behind the old church, sat down on an old tomb and began to eat their sandwiches. Nobody objected. The next day they came again. Other girls, emerging from stuffy restaurants, saw them and resolved to imitate them. The next day there were half a dozen there, and nowadays, when the noon hour is bright and sunny, the number has increased to sometimes seventy-five.—New York Cor., Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Equality of Sex.

There is a little girl in Springfield, Mass., who, like many of her sex, represents the imputation that the feminine mind is not so strong as the masculine.

One day her mother remarked on the apparent lack of intelligence in a hen.

"You can't teach a hen anything," she said. "They have done more harm to the garden than a drove of cattle would. You can teach a cat, a dog or a pig something, but a hen—never!"

"H'm!" exclaimed the child indignantly. "I think they know just as much as the roosters!"—Youth's Companion.

Not so in Britain. Over there to call a man a "nut," especially if he be a young man, is very likely to be a high compliment, for an English "nut" is a young gentleman who knows what the latest styles in dress are and wears them, who knows the latest steps in the dance and dances them and who is in every respect an all around, up to date sport. If such a "nut" owns a racing motorcar or perhaps has his own aeroplane he is automatically promoted to be a "super nut."

"Nut" in Britain has completely taken the place one finds in old English books represented by such words as "dandy," "buck" and "beau," a word that we Americans formerly rendered "dude."—Boston Herald.

Holland Stands Ready For Plunge into War.

The Hague, via London, Jan. 26.—“We must maintain under the colors out entire army, for at any moment incidents are possible which may render it necessary for us to make an appeal to arms,” said P. W. A. Van Der Linden, premier of the Netherlands to-day.

The statement was made in the second chamber of the Dutch Parliament when a bill for the extension of the military service was being discussed. The premier added that the government could not disclose the information it possessed concerning the foreign situation, because much of it was based on confidential documents.

Enemy Lost Zeppelin In Attack on Libau.

London, Jan. 26.—9.30 p.m.—It was officially announced in London this evening that the Zeppelin dirigible balloon which on Monday dropped bombs on the Russian port of Libau, in the Baltic Sea, was destroyed, and that the members of its crew were taken prisoners.

The admiralty to-night made public the following official statement from the naval general staff at Petrograd concerning the incident.

“Monday morning a Zeppelin appeared above Libau and had time to drop nine bombs on the undefended part of the town. After being fired at by the forts the Zeppelin fell into the water. Small craft were sent out and destroyed the Zeppelin and took her crew prisoners.”

Foe's Destroyers Sunk in Action?

Harwich, via London, Jan. 27.—A witness of the naval battle on Sunday in the North Sea, who has returned here, described the sinking of the German armored cruiser Blucher, as a terrible sight. The sea was covered with debris and men struggling for their lives.

When the British launched a boat to rescue the survivors a monoplane flew overhead and dropped bombs, which, tho they did not fall nearer than a hundred yards, prevented many of the drowning men from being taken out of the water.

One British destroyer was struck by a German shell, which pierced her

STRONG GERMAN SQUADRON OUT TO RAID MORE ENGLISH COAST TOWNS, BUT WAS INTERCEPTED BY BRITISH PATROLLING SQUADRON AND CHASED BACK TO ITS BASE—LIGHT CRUISERS AND DESTROYERS ALSO WERE ENGAGED. WHILE BIGGER SHIPS WERE FIGHTING.

London, Jan. 24.—An attempt by a German cruiser squadron to repeat the attack recently made on Scarborough, the Hartlepool and other British coast towns was frustrated to-day by the British patrolling squadron, and in a running fight the German armored cruiser Blucher was sunk and two German battle cruisers were seriously damaged.

The British ships suffered only slight injury, and so far as known, only 123 of the Blucher's crew of 885 were saved.

A battle also occurred between the light cruisers and destroyers accompanying the bigger ships, but the result of this engagement has not yet reached the admiralty.

GERMANS SAVED THEMSELVES.

The British were superior in ships engaged, weight of armament and speed, and the flight of the German ships into the mine and submarine infested field possibly saved them from further losses.

The Blucher was a cruiser of 15,550 tons displacement, and altho commissioned in 1908 was completely re-rigged last year. She was not classed as a battle cruiser but was in the next class to those formidable fighters. With her were the Derflinger, Germany's latest battle cruiser, which had just left the builder's hands, and the battle cruiser Seydlitz and Moltke, the latter a sister ship of the Goeben, formerly of the German but now of the Turkish fleet, which was recently reported damaged by the Russians in the Black Sea.

FIVE BRITISH CRUISERS.

The British squadron, commanded by Vice-Admiral Sir David Beatty, who also was in command at the battle of Heligoland last August, consisted of the battle cruisers Tiger, Lion, Princess Royal, New Zealand and Indomitable. The first three of these cruisers mount eight 13.5-inch guns each, and even the New Zealand and Indomitable carry 12-inch guns, which are equal to those of the Derflinger, the only one of the German ships that had better than 11-inch guns.

OFFICIAL REPORT OF FIGHT.

The official report issued by the press bureau gives the following account of the engagement.

“Early this morning a British patrolling squadron of battle cruisers and light cruisers, under Vice-Admiral Sir David Beatty, with a destroyer flotilla under Commander Tyrwhitt, sighted four German battle cruisers and several light cruisers and a number of destroyers, steering westward and apparently making for the English coast.

“The enemy at once made for home at high speed. They were at once pursued, and at about 9.30 a.m. action was joined between the battle cruisers Tiger, Lion, Princess Royal, New Zealand and Indomitable on the one hand and the Blucher, Seydlitz and Moltke on the other. The British ships were superior in ships engaged, weight of armament and speed, and the flight of the German ships into the mine and submarine infested field possibly saved them from further losses.

BEATTY SANK OTHER SHIPS.

Vice-Admiral Sir David Beatty, who was in command of the British force in this fight, also commanded a same battle cruiser squadron in an engagement off Heligoland Bight August 28 last, in which three German light cruisers and two German torpedo boat destroyers were sunk. The cruisers were the Mainz, Ariadne and Koln.

UNBOUNDED SATISFACTION.

Up to the present time the admiralty has issued no further details of the naval battle. The London morning papers editorially expressed unbounded satisfaction with what they described as retribution for German raids on the east coast of England. In Dover, Harwich and other naval ports the news created great joy among the naval men.

None of the units engaged in the naval battle appeared, so there is no further particulars. It is considered a victory for the heavy gun and the swift battle cruiser, and the papers point to the fact that while Great Britain still retains intact its great battle cruisers which she had at the opening of the war, Germany, which has sacrificed the Goeben in Turkey, now has only only four, including the Derflinger.

The Blucher was at the beginning of the war Prince Henry of Prussia's flagship in the Baltic, but it is understood that at the coming of winter he hauled down his flag.

OUT FOR BIG FIGHT.

The Times' naval correspondent, in a review of the naval fight, assumes that, from the composition of the German squadron, as announced by the British official press bureau, it was intended that the adventure should be on a large scale and at long distance from the German base. “Probably,” the correspondent adds, “the squadron met in the early morning and apparently a running fight of a hundred miles or more occurred at 30 miles an hour. It does great credit to the marksmanship of the British gunners that at such a rate of speed they should have inflicted such serious damage on the retreating enemy.”

“The names of the four German cruisers include all the effective vessels of this class in German waters except the Von der Tann, which recently was reported to have sustained an injury of some sort. Thus with the Blucher sunk and two other damaged, the strength of the German battle fleet in this respect has been reduced to a couple of ships. Probably if the Derflinger was leaking it must have been the Seydlitz and Moltke which were damaged. By this action, the Germans are deprived of the services of the fast wing of their battle fleet if ever they challenge.

When the British launched a boat to rescue the survivors a monoplane flew overhead and dropped bombs, which, tho they did not fall nearer than a hundred yards, prevented many of the drowning men from being taken out of the water.

One British destroyer was struck by a German shell, which pierced her boilers and put her out of action. She was towed to the east coast base for repairs.

Thruout the progress of the action the British vessels were constantly attacked by German submarines, but British torpedo boat destroyers kept circling around and successfully ward off this danger.

DESTROYERS SUNK?

All the men engaged in the battle describe it as thrilling, and the results from the British standpoint are reported to have been even better than announ'ed by the admiralty, because in addition to the destruction of the Blucher, it is claimed that some German destroyers were sunk. It is believed that one of the two German cruisers damaged was the Derflinger. One of them was in flames.

A German survivor admits that the objective of the German squadron was a port on the east coast of England.

Among the reports circulated here, but not confirmed, is that a British destroyer sank a German submarine which was attempting to torpedo another of the destroyers.

Two Speeds In Same Wheel.

The top of a carriage wheel in passing along the road moves more quickly through the atmosphere than the bottom. This sounds absolutely foolish, but it is absolutely sound. It is due to the movable axis, or axle. The top of the wheel has forward motion plus forward revolution. The bottom of the wheel has the same forward motion minus backward revolution. — London Saturday Review.

The Cheerful Man.

"Is this train on time?" asked the restless passenger.

"No," replied the conductor. "We're two hours late."

press bureau gives the following account of the engagement.

"Early this morning a British patrolling squadron of battle cruisers and light cruisers, under Vice-Admiral Sir David Beatty, with a destroyer flotilla under Commander Tyrwhitt, sighted four German battle cruisers and several light cruisers and a number of destroyers, steering westward and apparently making for the English coast.

"The enemy at once made for home at high speed. They were at once pursued, and at about 9.30 a.m. action was joined between the battle cruisers Tiger, Lion, Princess Royal, New Zealand and Indomitable on the one hand, and the Derflinger, Seydlitz, Moltke and Blucher on the other. A well contested running fight ensued. Shortly after one o'clock the Blucher, which had previously fallen out of line, capsized and sank.

FLED TO MINE AREA.

"Admiral Beatty reports that two other battle cruisers were seriously damaged. They were, however, able to continue their flight and reached an area where danger from German submarines and mines prevented further pursuit.

"No British ships have been lost and our casualties in personnel as at present reported are slight, the Lion, which led the line, having only eleven wounded and no killed.

"One hundred and twenty-three survivors have been rescued from the Blucher's crew of 885, and it is possible that others have been saved by some of our destroyers. No reports of any destroyer or light cruiser fighting have yet been received at the admiralty, tho some have apparently taken place.

"Their lordships have expressed their satisfaction to Vice-Admiral Sir David Beatty."

BLUCHER COMPARATIVELY NEW.

The German armored cruiser Blucher was a comparatively new vessel. She was built at the Kiel yards in 1909 at a cost of $6,500,000, and three years later most of her big guns were replaced. The Blucher was 489 feet, 80 1-3 feet beam, and her complement consisted of 847 officers and men.

The Blucher carried twelve 8.2 guns, eight 6-inch guns, and sixteen 24-pounders. She also was equipped with three torpedo tubes. The Blucher was capable of travelling a little more than 26 knots an hour.

Commodore Reginald Y. Tyrwhitt, who also took part in the battle off Heligoland, commanded the light cruisers and destroyers which accompanied Vice-Admiral Beatty's battle cruisers.

FULL SPEED FOR HOME.

The Germans were observed some time after dawn proceeding in the direction of the British coast. When they sighted the superior British fleet they turned and made at full speed for home waters, and it was only after a stern chase that the faster British ships got within range of them. For more than four hours the running battle lasted, the firing being plainly heard in North Holland, where it was judged the fight took place north of the Islands of Ameland and Schiermonnik-Oog.

The Blucher which was slower than the other German cruisers, fell behind and succumbed to the heavier guns of the Lion, which was leading the British squadron. The other German ships got within the mine and submarine area, two of them in a badly damaged condition and it was dangerous for the big British battle cruisers to follow.

The fact that only 11 men were wounded aboard the Lion, which led the line, indicates that the British casualties were light. It is possible that more of the Blucher's crew were picked up by the British destroyers.

BEATTY SANK OTHER SHIPS.

Vice-Admiral Sir David Beatty, who was in command of the British forces in this fight, also commanded the same battle cruiser squadron in the engagement off Heligoland Bight Aug. 28 last, in which three German light cruisers and two German torpedo boat destroyers were sunk. The cruisers were the Mainz, Ariadne and Koeln.

UNBOUNDED SATISFACTION.

Up to the present time the admiralty has issued no further details of the naval battle. The London morning papers editorially express unbounded satisfaction with what they describe as retribution for Germany's raids on the east coast of England. In Dover, Harwich and other naval ports the news created great joy among the naval men.

None of the units engaged in the naval battle appeared, so there are no further particulars. It is considered a victory for the heavy gun and the swift battle cruiser, and the papers point to the fact that while Great Britain still retains intact ten such battle cruisers which she had at the opening of the war, Germany, which has sacrificed the Goeben to Turkey, now has only only four, including the Derflinger.

The Blucher was at the beginning of the war Prince Henry of Prussia's flagship in the Baltic, but it is understood that at the coming of winter he hauled down his flag.

OUT FOR BIG FIGHT.

The Times' naval correspondent, in a review of the naval fight, assumes that, from the composition of the German squadron, as announced by the British official press bureau, it was intended that the adventure should be on a large scale and at a long distance from the German base. "Probably," the correspondent adds, "the squadron met in the early morning and apparently a running fight of a hundred miles or more occurred at 30 miles an hour. It does great credit to the marksmanship of the British gunners that at such a rate of speed they should have inflicted such serious damage on the retreating enemy."

The names of the four German cruisers include all the effective vessels of this class in German waters, except the Von der Tann, which recently was reported to have sustained an injury of some sort. Thus, with the Blucher sunk and two others damaged, the strength of the German battle fleet in this respect has been reduced to a couple of ships. Probably if the Derflinger was leading it must have been the Seydlitz and Moltke which were damaged. By his action, the Germans are deprived of the services of the fast wing to their battle fleet if ever they challenge for a decisive fight for sea command."

GUNS, GUNS AND SPEED.

The Times, in an editorial this morning on the naval engagement in the North Sea, points out that the moral of every sea fight in the present war has been "guns, guns, coupled with speed."

The editorial declares the Blucher was one of the German ships which bombarded Scarborough, and says it is interesting to remember that she was "Germany's reply to England's first dreadnought."

CONGRATULATES THE COUNTRY.

The Times in common with other morning newspapers congratulates the country on what it says is the proved vigilance of the navy. The Times adds that only the admiralty and commanders of the squadron know how by a very small margin—a matter of a half hour and a fog—the German squadron escaped after the Scarborough raid.

Germans Try to Stir up States.

Paris, Jan. 25.—5.50 p.m.—The Temps, in its leading editorial, discussing the Dacia incident, says:

"The Germans have thought to put Anglo-American relations to a new test. They have attached to their protests regarding marine contraband the Dacia affair, with the double purpose of furnishing additional support to those who in the United States are leading the campaign against England in the name of American commerce and saving their merchant vessels which have taken refuge in transatlantic ports.

"They seek at the same time by this desperate effort to guard against the effects of the blockade which is stopping the provisioning of Germany.

FUTILE EFFORTS.

"Senator Lodge's view will meet with the approbation of a great majority on the other side who favor the triumph of justice. Special interests always have been powerless to stifle right in that way. One can believe futile all the mischievous efforts to stir up John Bull and Uncle Sam by family quarrels."

German Wheat Seized To Safeguard Bread Supply.

Berlin, via Amsterdam, to London, Jan. 26, 2.05 a.m.—All stocks of wheat have been received by the German Government, according to the official statement, in order to safeguard the bread supply until the next harvest. This measure, it is said, was made necessary by the fact that the people have failed to economize. The stocks will be distributed according to the population of the various communities.

British Airmen Smash 400 Cars.

Amsterdam, Jan. 25.—The British air raid last week on the town of Essen resulted in the destruction of 400 war automobiles, according to a correspondent of the Handelsblad. These cars were in a repair shop which was wrecked by the British bombs.

The loss of this large shop and its elaborate equipment, the correspondent continues, has been a serious blow, and the Germans have been compelled to take over a private automobile factory at Aix-La-Chapelle, where hundreds of Dutch workmen have obtained employment.

Britain Will Seize Food Ship From U.S.

London, Jan. 25.—(6.20 p.m.)—Unless a positive guarantee is given that the cargo of foodstuffs on the American steamer Wilhelmina, which sailed from New York Friday for Germany, will not reach the German army, it is likely the ship will be stopped by the Allies. Because of the alleged general practice of the German authorities in seizing for military use any foodstuffs, it is stated that the British officials would not regard the consignment of the food ship to some individual or firm any proof that its ultimate destination is not the army.

Under the conditions that are alleged to exist in Germany, it is believed here that it is virtually impossible to guarantee that any foodstuffs destined for civilian use will reach the consignees.

British Shell Fire Terribly Effective.

London, Jan. 27.—The Scotsman today published a narrative of a German bluejacket, one of the survivors of the German armored cruiser Blucher, who once lived in the United States.

The bluejacket said the German fleet was advancing at full speed to attack the English coast when the British warships were sighted. Thereupon the Germans turned and made for port. The Blucher, which was comparatively slow, made desperate efforts to keep up her maximum speed but the British overhauled and opened fire upon her at a range of about ten miles.

"We were under fire from first to last," the bluejacket continues. "The British centred their fire on us. Their fire was awful. Our guns were put out of action, our decks were swept and our gun crews wiped out.

LUCILLE LOVE

THE GIRL OF MYSTERY

BY THE
"MASTER PEN"

Lucille felt a shot slash through the sleeve of her jacket. She reined in her horse instantly, for she knew the Mexicans had passed. As she turned she almost collided with a long mustached, grizzled man, driving bullet after bullet after the marauders. She did not speak, did not even rein in, but urged her own horse beside his, drawing her own revolver.

The ranchman uttered a bewildered ejaculation as he saw she was of his own blood.

"I was trying to get there in time to warn you," she gasped. "There's a chance of driving them into the patrol if you know where it is."

Without another word, as though complete understanding had been established, he waved to the right; came a sudden abrupt wheeling of the stampede; came a rifle shot, more like a cloth being ripped it was than anything else. Lucille heard the sharp voice of the sentry; saw the hesitancy of the Mexicans even as they buddled close together, facing that solitary figure in olive khaki, bestriding his mount as though carved from granite.

They looked hesitatingly behind them. The ranchman's revolver sounded, and their leader threw his hands in the air and flopped over upon his horse's neck. The soldier's voice rang out to them, and the frightened bandits threw down their short carbines in token of surrender. The sentry waited until Lucille and the ranchman came up, then listened to their story, at the end demanding their presence before his commanding officer.

CHAPTER XVIII.

The Work of a Thief.

THE girl listened silently to the ranchman's gratitude, then watched him as, following the captives, he entered the house to which they had been brought. It took but a little while for the sentry to emerge. Then she caught her breath with a cry of delight as she recognized a young officer whom she had known in the Philippines. He beckoned her silently, seating himself at his desk and writing busily for a moment before nodding briskly that she should speak. A dancing imp of mischief was in her eyes as she uttered his name.

"Lieutenant Carmody, don't you remember me?"

The young officer's eyes opened as wide as his mouth.

He Got Her Some Proper Clothing.

"But why?"

"Because," and all the mirth had gone from her face, all the laughter from the eyes that were reverently lifted, "because everything I have done has been done for the sake of love and because love has watched over me and helped me. That is the reason, Lieutenant Carmody, Hugo Loubeque can never be beaten or brought to justice because of fear or hate, for his own powers in that direction are greater than those of nations."

"Well?" The officer unwillingly agreed. "What do you propose doing? Isn't there some way in which I can help you?"

"Yes," she answered promptly. "You can let me have money. You can tell me how to dispose of one of these valuable rubies, or all of them, and you can help me catch the first train for San Francisco."

Carmody whistled aloud his amazed delight as he regarded the marvelous jewels in the necklace she laid upon the table. Then he loaned her the money he had and insisted upon her lying down and resting until he could skirlish up some proper clothing and

No trace of anxiety he showed. He was confident of himself. Came a clamping down upon the ties as the air brakes worked. Thompson threw open his window, looking out to discover it was opposite a tiny station. With a pocket knife he cut out the screen that separated him from the tracks.

Cautiously he looked up and down the track. The train was slowing down. He tossed his bag far out from him, then slipped partially through the window. The lights of the station were almost in his eyes when he jumped, landing on his feet and regaining his balance with an effort. Then he permitted himself the luxury of a smile.

The next train through would be time enough, and the booty in his breast pocket was worth many risks.

Lucille felt herself struggling with a desperate enemy, one whose fingers were of steel as they fastened themselves about her throat, grasped at her breath and held it despite her utmost efforts. Even in the effort to waken, unsuccessful though it was, she seemed to recognize the calm, imperturbable, businesslike features of Thompson.

Then she felt a sensation of ease and comfort and peace such as had not been hers for a long time, and she allowed herself to drift away upon the gentle flowing river that hummed its song in her ears.

She awakened to find herself being shaken violently by the conductor and a porter, whose ebony face had changed to a saffron shade. Her head ached so fearfully that she pressed her feverish palms to her temples to keep it from bursting. Her throat and mouth felt as though she had been subsisting upon a diet of cotton soaked in oil.

She staggered to her feet and stood, dazed and bewildered, in the aisle of the car. The conductor turned her over to two women, who stood with her upon the platform, supporting her trembling figure while the fresh air drove away the fumes of chloroform and gas to which she had been subjected.

First she felt the rush of the train, the dotting of lights in the distance, the rush of the train past the lights, only to come upon a new cluster. And she was rushing, rushing, rushing, just like these lights to a cavernous blackness which she could not describe even to herself.

Suddenly the reason for her being upon the train came to her, and her hands sought her breast, then her throat. With a little cry she staggered back into the arms of the women.

"Robbed!" she gasped. "I have been robbed!"

The women looked at one another pityingly, then incredulously and finally believingly as they caught the pallor and sanity on the girl's face. Summoning all her strength, she turned the knob of the door and sought the conductor. He looked incredulous at the girl's charge, but investigation showed that the light had been tampered with. Nothing, however, could be done before reaching San Francisco except a search of the car.

Lucille went with him from place to place, scanning every face. But she knew who had done this thing. When she fought against the fingers of the drugs they had been the fingers of Thompson. When she had slipped from peaceful slumber into the drugged stupor it was Thompson she had been bravely fighting.

But Thompson, whose had he been the slickers and hats of the frem were laid. Once more she looked at her, then flung herself into a long rubber coat and jammed a helmet over her head.

Swiftly Loubeque peered over the stairs. Without an instant's hesitation Lucille had sped to the basement. He tiptoed to the room that had been assigned her when he held her captive here. Pressing a button, one wall of the room opened. He peered below watching her as, below, she searched feverishly for the papers.

Loubeque quietly moved back to his own room. Slowly his fingers reached out. Came a slight clink of machine. Then the spy stepped below and received the assurance of the fire captain that everything was well. His smile was that of a man quite positive that everything was more than well.

CHAPTER XIX.

An Appeal.

LUCILLE started just as her hand encountered the packet of disgrimed papers and documents. A faint humming sound mingled with the heavy tread of the firemen above stairs. But she had won was victorious after many defeats. Still, that sound—

She seemed to have heard it before. With a little cry of horror she looked up, her hands clasping the packet over her breast. The room that had been her boudoir was slowly closing down upon her, was moving down, down down, its dark floor threatening to crush her like a letterpress closes up its contents. Then it stopped.

She looked toward the door through which she had entered, her delight

She Saw Loubeque In the Doorway

the escape dying before the sight of Loubeque's tall, saturnine figure in the doorway, the glowing cigar tip pecked out his every feature, the hateful smile upon his face. He extended his hand, bowing gracefully, sardonically.

"The packet of papers, Miss Lucille, if you please," he murmured. For the fleeting second Lucille wondered what would happen did she refuse to surrender the papers to Loubeque—wondered what diabolical thought might enter his brain when he found to which they had been brought. It took but a little while for the sentry to emerge. Then she caught her breath with a cry of delight as she recognized a young officer whom she had known in the Philippines. He beckoned her silently, seating himself at his desk and writing busily for a moment before nodding briskly that she should speak. A dancing imp of mischief was in her eyes as she uttered his name.

"Lieutenant Carmody, don't you remember me?"

The young officer's eyes opened as wide as his mouth.

"Lucille Love!" he gasped, half rising from his seat—"Lucille Love or her ghost?"

"A very tired and hungry ghost," she laughed delightedly. "Just try me and see."

As he summoned his orderly and gave him instructions to bring instantly some canned stuff Lucille hurriedly sketched out her adventures to him, eagerly persuading him when his face showed that he half believed she had taken leave of her senses. His expression was very grave when she finished.

"I suppose you know that Gibson was permitted to resign and nobody knows where he went?" he queried.

"Hugo Loubeque showed me the newspaper," she nodded. "And father"—Her tone was numbed at being brought into such close contact with one who could realize what all these things meant.

"The general is under a heavy cloud of suspicion. He has requested an inquiry into his own conduct in the affair. The messages were most important—in fact, their sale could harm us greatly."

"And the people think that I"—"You have long since been given up for drowned, Harley told of taking you aboard the Empress. The wreck is common knowledge, of course. I must reassure them immediately."

"No," she shook her head decidedly. "I have gone this far, and I firmly believe some influence is at work on my behalf, helping me to do things better than any man could do them."

"But"—he protested.

"No," she shook her head firmly. "You have no idea how dangerous a game it is working against Hugo Loubeque. There is every chance that he may yet defeat me; that I may be killed or injured before I succeed. Father would demand my return, papers or no papers. Can't you see what it means to me? Can't you see that the man who has ruled and ruined nations, who has compelled thousands to do his will, has every chance of success against anything a man could do?"

The officer smiled a superior smile. Lucille merely took the diary of the spy from its hiding place and placed it in his hands, watching the swift changes of expression upon his face as he read. Finally he returned it to the owner.

"Please eat," he said quietly, motioning toward the end of the desk where the orderly was spreading a cold repast of canned meats and vegetables and steaming coffee, "and forgive me if I can't talk now. I must think what is best to be done."

Lucille smiled as she devoted her attention to the repast. She finally finished to find young Lieutenant Carmody staring fixedly at her, his brow clouded.

"It's too much for me," he muttered. "Of course it is," she laughed heartily. "But I firmly believe that I will win."

agreed. "What do you propose doing? Isn't there some way in which I can help you?"

"Yes," she answered promptly. "You can let me have money. You can tell me how to dispose of one of these valuable rubies, or all of them, and you can help me catch the first train for San Francisco."

Carmody whistled aloud his amazed delight as he regarded the marvelous jewels in the necklace she laid upon the table. Then he loaned her the money he had and insisted upon her lying down and resting until he could skirlish up some proper clothing and find out about the trains.

It was dawn before she awakened, and, though she felt alarm lest he had allowed her to miss a train, his reassurance and the sight of the clothing he had found for her made things seem much brighter. Then, too, the ninety odd dollars in currency seemed far more than even the rubies about her neck. Several hours later she boarded the train, assisted by a worried looking young officer, her heart light and gay, for she felt within herself that the journey that had been so long and so hazardous was finally nearing an end; that the familiar, dear faces would surround her on every side.

With every clamping of the wheels upon the frogs of the track her heart gave up a song of confidence, for Hugo Loubeque had put forward his own strength against her and, added to this, the strength of a portion of his organization. He had imprisoned her in two apparently impregnable places, and still she was here, all unbeknownst to him, speeding toward his house, intent upon beating him once and for all.

And in the compartment at which she stared with unseeing eyes Thompson regarded her in the mirror, his own eyes glittering with malicious triumph and with avarice.

Thompson crouched back in his compartment, feigning deep slumber while the colored porter made up his bed. Immediately the porter disappeared he became the incarnation of energy. His hands nervously fumbled with the lock of his grip, opening it finally and disclosing a secret trap in the bottom, from which he took an atomizer, a pair of nippers and a bottle of pale viscid fluid.

For an hour he waited, motionless, not even his fixed eyes blinking as he regarded the curtains of the berth Lucille occupied.

He was swift; he was certain; he was sure. Deftly parting the curtains, he looked down upon the sleeping girl. No atom of pity was in his heart. All the thief now, his eyes glittered as he allowed them to rest upon the glowing strand of stones about her neck.

Swiftly he leaned over, applying his pliers to the gas jet and unscrewing it so that the odor of the gas slowly began filling the stuffy section. Then he gently sprayed the ether across her face, never moving when she unconsciously stirred to fight off the anæsthetic.

Her breathing became heavier while her lips took on a bluish tinge. The gas was becoming stronger, and he knew her condition would be ascribed to asphyxiation when she recovered from the effects of the ether. Stooping, with no appearance of care now, he unfasted the rubies from her throat. A moment he waited, slipping them in his pocket, then he slipped back to his own compartment.

Carefully he repacked his grip, tucking the necklace in his breast pocket. Against the door he crouched, waiting.

knob of the door and sought the conductor. He looked incredulous at the girl's charge, but investigation showed that the light had been tampered with. Nothing, however, could be done before reaching San Francisco except a search of the car.

Lucille went with him from place to place, scanning every face. But she knew who had done this thing. When she fought against the fingers of the drugs they had been the fingers of Thompson. When she had slipped from peaceful slumber into the drugged stupor it was Thompson she had been bravely fighting.

But Thompson—where had he disappeared? What had become of the man?

"We know who the thief was, miss," reported the conductor a little later. "He had the compartment facing your section. The screen is cut out. He must have dropped out the window after working his game."

Lucille smiled faintly. "A medium sized man, rather dark, plainly dressed, with features that nobody would notice especially and—no vivid scar across the side of his face," she murmured.

The man looked at her in surprise.

"Thompson," she murmured. "Yes; it was Thompson. I was positive from the first."

As the conductor corroborated her description of the thief she lay back against the dusty cushions of her seat idly watching the train charging across the landscape. She had started badly, but she clinched her teeth firmly. Her purpose was firm as ever, her rage a bit higher.

Hugo Loubeque cursed profoundly to himself as he paced up and down the floor of his San Francisco house. From below came the sounds of his servants searching into every nook and cranny of the mysterious house for the packet of papers and documents he knew Lucille had hidden here.

He frowned heavily as he went to the window and looked down upon the street, deserted now save for the old woman who trudged toward the place. She carried a basket of fruit over her arm and Loubeque smiled grimly as she disappeared from his sight, then reappeared after being turned away from the door by the servant.

As he idly studied the woman something about her caught and held his attention. She moved slowly, but there was an affectation about that slowness.

Loubeque's eyes were fastened, like those of a hawk now, upon the old woman. She had stopped beside the alarm box on the corner lamppost. Suddenly the bent form straightened and he read the impulsive resolve of youth in every movement of the illly attired old woman. Her hand groped upon the ground. He saw her pick up a stone and smash the fire alarm.

Came the sound of fire engines rolling down the street. Loubeque watched the woman. She dashed toward the captain as he darted up in his light buggy, pointing eagerly toward the house of the spy, her eyes glowing with excitement. Then Loubeque smiled as he pressed a bell and ordered the search to stop immediately.

Before the rush of firemen with their hose the door opened. Their heavy feet slumped upon the stairs, throughout the house. But Loubeque did not move. He watched Lucille as she tossed aside the habiliments she had worn over her girlish clothes. She looked swiftly about to make certain no one was in sight. Then she swiftly approached the extra truck upon which the escape dying before the sight of Loubeque's tall, saturnine figure in the doorway, the glowing cigar tip picking out his every feature, the hateful smile upon his face. He extended his hand, bowing gracefully, sardonically. "The packet of papers, Miss Lucille if you please," he murmured.

For the fleeting second Lucille wondered what would happen did she refuse to surrender the papers to Loubeque—wondered what diabolical thought might enter his brain when he found himself defied. A glance at the room which had started to descend upon her drove the thought away as quickly. It brought a shudder through her slender frame. Slowly, reluctantly, she held out the packet to him, watching him furtively, as with the utmost courtesy he bowed and placed it in his breast pocket.

Slowly he conducted her up the stairs. In his private room he motioned her to a chair, seating himself by the desk.

"I am not going to threaten you again," he said quietly. "I wish you to know that this is the last time you can interfere with my plans. Can you not be made to see what fol is this—this fight against me?"

"Mr. Loubeque," she said softly, "have you never grieved that it is impossible for the finer feelings you continually suppressing to be returned because your ambitions are cruel as base? I do not like to wage this constant war with you. I do not like battle with the man who has been kind to me in his own way that I could love him as another father. But you would ruin my father; you would wreck my sweetheart's life. You would keep me apart from perfect happiness after I have merely peeked through the door of that happiness only to have it slammed shut in my face. Can you see that it is you who must come down to defeat? Can't you see that love such as supports a frail girl battle with you as I have done will not be downed by the most powerful man? Can't you see that I cannot stand even if I do sometimes grow weary and sick at heart and pray this soul of mine to let me lie down for a little while and rest? Rest—rest! She broke off with a sob of the most acute distress. "There is no such word as rest for me. Always it is going on, on, constantly going on, until it seems must fall along the wayside. But I do not fall. I have won from you constantly; I have always won, and shall always continue to win. As you know it, Mr. Loubeque, for I can see it on your face—now."

Like one inspired she was, as the halting tones of her plea changed those of passionate conviction, a certainty that expressed itself in words tumbling from the tongue with utter abandon, words that seemed to come from other lips than her own. And Loubeque looked back at the beautiful figure of the girl he was surprised to see that suddenly she seemed have changed, that the slip of a child who had come on board the Empress from the hydroaeroplane had suddenly become a woman of such capacity of love and hate as even he himself did not have.

Came back to him the girl he had loved and whom he still loved as fondly as in the old days of flirtation at the Point, from which he had been expelled. Swiftly she came to his side, placing her hand upon his shoulder, her voice low and tender again.

the slickers and hats of the firemen were laid. Once more she looked about her, then flung herself into a long rubber coat and jammed a helmet over her head.

Swiftly Loubeque peered over the stairs. Without an instant's hesitation Lucille had sped to the basement. He slipped to the room that had been assigned her when he held her captive here. Pressing a button, one wall of the room opened. He peered below, watching her as, below, she searched feverishly for the papers.

Loubeque quietly moved back to his own room. Slowly his fingers reached out. Came a slight clink of machinery. Then the spy stepped below and received the assurance of the fire captain that everything was well. His smile was that of a man quite positive that everything was more than well.

CHAPTER XIX.

An Appeal.

LUCILLE started just as her hands encountered the packet of begrimed papers and documents. A faint humming sound mingled with the heavy tread of the firemen above stairs. But she had won, was victorious after many defeats. Still, that sound—

She seemed to have heard it before. With a little cry of horror she looked up, her hands clasping the packet to her breast. The room that had been her boudoir was slowly closing down upon her, was moving down, down, down, its dark floor threatening to rush her like a letterpress closes upon its contents. Then it stopped.

She looked toward the door through which she had entered, her delight at like the sighing of an April breeze through the greening baby leaves.

"You think you are working for hate, and all the time you are working for the same reason that I am—you are working because of love. Can you not see what a perversion of love is this thing you constantly seek to do? Can you not?"

Lucille could feel the man's shoulders trembling, could mark the tremendous effort he made at self control. She was almost ready to plead with him for a return of the papers, to give up his entire life work and count it failure, confident that he was well along the road to doing so, when a rap sounded on the door.

For some reason which she could not define a shudder ran through her at the sound. She seemed to recognize a sinister presence close by. She glanced at Loubeque, and her heart sank as she saw the wave of emotion she had bred within him had passed, that he was again the icy, indefatigable international spy.

"Come in," he called briskly.

Slowly, cautiously, yet with not the slightest uncertainty, the door pushed open. Before the visitor appeared on the threshold Lucille knew who it would be.

For a moment she was taken aback by Thompson's perfect aplomb. She knew he had been the one who robbed her of her necklace, that he had sprayed her with ether and taken it from about her throat while she slept. And yet not so much as by the quiver of an eyelash did he show any sign of surprise or fear.

"I was delayed, sir," the butler began apologetically, when Loubeque lifted his hand imperatively.

"You were delayed," coldly repeated the spy, separating every syllable and meting it out as though it were a death judgment. "It is perhaps better that you were delayed, Thompson. I have just received a letter from a man with whom you are acquainted. In this letter, Thompson, he informs me he intends turning traitor to my interests, that he intends assisting Miss Love to make her escape."

"Quite so, sir," murmured the butler-thief.

"I am informed by him that he spied upon you while you cut through the bars of Miss Love's window."

Thompson did not stir, but Lucille saw the scar go a sickly white.

"The man lied, sir."

"Men do not lie at such moments."

For just a moment Thompson was silent. The hush upon the room was so profound as to make the ticking of Loubeque's watch strike upon the ears like mallet strokes. Slowly the butler's index finger moved to the scar upon his cheek.

"The man you speak of evidently did the work in the hope of releasing Miss Love. I gained this scar while trying to prevent the flight, sir."

"It's a lie!" Lucille burst forth passionately. "That man tried to rob me here in this very house. That was why I insisted upon a maid to serve me when I took the drug you put in the drink."

"Why did you not mention it at that time?" The spy's tones were dubious.

"Because I did not wish you to know I had anything of such value about me."

"Value? You had no money when you left Manila."

"No, but I obtained possession of a wonderful ruby necklace in the cavern of the jungle just before I was rescued by the filibuster. Three nights

Historic Huy.

Huy, in Belgium, is the burial place of Peter the Hermit, who aroused Europe to holy zeal and inspired the first crusade against the Saracens. He founded here the abbey of Neufmoustier, and it is within its limits his ashes are interred. The single fortress is perhaps stronger than any one of the defenses at Liege, the citadel being partly excavated in solid rock. It commands the passage of the Meuse, on both banks of which the city is picturesquely situated amid lofty rocks. The Church of Notre Dame, a graceful Gothic edifice, was begun in 1311. The town is seventeen miles southwest of Liege. Its industries are paper, leather, beer, zinc, spirits and wine.

Victor Hugo's Appetite.

Hugo was himself a curious mixture of the aristocrat with the democrat. For these mixed dinner parties he sent out formal invitations on printed cards. Another inconsistency was his vulgar longing for public praise. He was in the seventh heaven when the crowd shouted "Vive Hugo!" In order to be in contact with the people he rode on the imperial omnibuses and talked with everybody. At table one hardly knew which to admire more, his conversation or his appetite. Both were exceptional. Hugo never did anything by halves. His repasts were gargantuan, and he drank as much as he Thought He Was Mad.

The late Count de Lesseps was traveling on one occasion in a French railway train in a compartment with two commercial travelers.

"I beg your pardon, sir," said one of them—"are you not a traveler?"

"Certainly I am," said the count.

"We thought so! What is your line?"

"Isthmuses."

"Wh-wh-what," asked the puzzled commercial—"what are they?"

"I am introducing ship canals," said De Lesseps gravely.

The commercial travelers feared that they had fallen in with a lunatic and were making preparations to escape when the count handed them his card and put them at their ease.

Lure of the Opera.

The music of operas always has been and always will be the lure of its millions of patrons; the singing, too, is frequently brilliant and perfect, but the presentment of scenes from life upon the stage where everything, however commonplace and banal, is sung, however beautifully, will always sadden the soul by the very impossibility and inappropriateness of the spectacle. Fat tenors and sopranos expire in flights of high notes, choruses express various quite unnecessary sentiments with what vocal skill they may, and the average person who likes music and a little

Three nights ago when I boarded the train for here that man drugged me while I slept and stole the necklace from about my throat. Then he dropped out of the window of his compartment. That is why he was detained."

Loubeque fastened his cold eyes upon the butler. The man had nerves as steady as a rock. Lucille studied the judge and culprit earnestly. She could see that Thompson was beating down the spy's belief in her story. Swift as a flash, without a second's thought, she darted toward the thief. She had noticed his fingers involuntarily seek the right hand breast pocket of his coat when she made her charge. In one swift movement she had ripped open the coat. With the other hand she plunged toward the place she knew the necklace to be.

At first Thompson was taken off his guard. Then he sprang back with a hoarse cry of rage and alarm, forgetful of everything. The girl clung to her hold like a tigress. He grasped her wrist roughly and thrust her, reeling, across the room, his eyes glaring as, with clinched fists, he stared at her, while, dazed though she was by the violence of him, she held triumphantly in her hand the gorgeously dazzling ruby necklace.

Hugo Loubeque did not utter a sound; did not change expressions for one instant. Slowly, with all the leisurely grace of some giant animal, he rose and stepped toward his minion.

The Wedding Ring.

There are several theories as to the origin of the wedding ring. Here is one of them: Before the time of mints and coinage the gold money in Egypt was made in the form of a ring, usually worn on the finger as a convenient method of carrying and safe keeping. The men and women therefore had all their gold or wealth made into rings, and for the majority of people these rings were no larger than the plain gold bands of to-day. Thus when the groom placed the ring on the bride's finger he meant exactly what the modern service makes him say—he did actually endow his bride with all his worldly goods.

The music of operas always has been and always will be the lure of its millions of patrons; the singing, too, is frequently brilliant and perfect, but the presentation of scenes from life upon the stage where everything, however commonplace and banal, is sung, however beautifully, will always sadden the soul by the very impossibility and inappropriateness of the spectacle. Fat tenors and sopranos expire in flights of high notes, choruses express various quite unnecessary sentiments with what vocal skill they may, and the average person who likes music and a little logic, too, is thrown into ecstasies of wonderment.

Bird's Milk.

"I fed him with bird's milk." This curious expression was used by the old Sultan of Turkey, while a prisoner on his way to Saloniki, with reference to his brother Mohammed, his predecessor on the throne. Abdul Hamid was lamenting his own fate and telling his captors how little he deserved it and how kind he had been to his brother. "I fed him with bird's milk," he said, as if that were the greatest kindness he could show. What is bird's milk? Not the Turkish equivalent of the milk of human kindness, but a European brand of condensed milk bearing on the can a picture of a bird on a nest.

Modernize your Kitchen

One by one the bugbears of housekeeping are being put to rout through the instrumentality of gas. The modern kitchen—which means the all-gas kitchen—is now a recognized part of the up-to-date home. The all-gas kitchen lightens labor. It means a clean, wholesome, sanitary kitchen, as there is no coal dust or ashes to be spread around, and it becomes a real pleasure to work in it. Every housewife desires to cook and heat water in the most economical way, in the quickest, most dependable way, with the least possible work.

The All-Gas way is the solution to the problem.

The hot weather is here now and if you want a cool, comfortable kitchen this summer come and select your Gas Range and Water Heater now. We have ranges at all prices.

MARION'S LEAP FOR LIFE.

One of the Thrilling Feats of the Famous "Swamp Fox."

General Marion was a native of South Carolina, and the theater of his military exploits was the coast region of that state. He was slender and not very tall, and he rode when in service an extremely swift footed and powerful horse. When in fair pursuit nothing could escape and when in flight nothing could overtake him. Once he was almost surrounded by a party of British dragoons and had to take refuge in a cornfield. The field, which lay several feet lower than the adjoining land, had formerly been part of the marsh. General Marion entered it at the upper side; the dragoons who were in chase of him leaped the fence also, and were only a short distance behind him. His only possible way of escape was to leap the fence at the lower side.

To drain the field of its superfluous water a trench had been cut round that part of the field four feet wide and four feet deep. The mud and clay removed in cutting the ditch made a bank on its inner side, and on the top of the bank was a fence. In all, the top of the fence was nearly eight feet above the level of the field, and the ditch, four feet wide, ran parallel with it on the farther side. The dragoons knew the nature of this obstacle, and believed that it was impossible for their enemy to pass it. Accordingly, they pushed forward with loud shouts of exultation, calling out to him to surrender or perish by the sword.

Marion, however, spurred his horse to the charge. The noble animal, as if conscious that his master's life was in danger, approached the barrier in his finest style and, with a bound that was almost supernatural, cleared the fence and ditch completely and recovered himself without loss of time on the other side. Marion instantly wheeled about, discharged his pistol at the astonished dragoons and then, turning his horse and bidding them good morning, departed.

If the height of the leap is authentic it must be the most remarkable performance ever made by a horse under saddle, for it is almost exactly the equal of the highest jump on record, made by the famous Heatherbloom, and that, of course, was made from the level and carefully prepared take off of a race track, which is a very different matter from the loose and heavy soil of a cornfield. The story may have grown a little in the mouths of General Marion's admiring men, but the incident was clearly enough one of the most remarkably narrow escapes ever made by that daring and resourceful soldier, who was famous for his cleverness in wriggling again and again out of the clutches of the enemy.—Youth's Companion.

AGRICULTURAL CLASS.

The Napanee Agricultural Class opened on Monday, Jan. 25th. Due to the severe snow storm the attendance was not as good as expected. However, the class is being held. A special invitation is given to any farmers son to come in Monday morning, Feb. 1st, and take the remainder of the course. Mr. Leo Flynn, Enterprise, and Mr. John J. Kearns, Tamworth, have just returned from a two weeks course in Agriculture at Guelph. All their expenses were paid by the Ontario Department of Agriculture. Napanee, these young farmers winning first and second in the Ace Profit Competition with Flint Corn. Mr. Flynn raised 105 bushels of Long-fellow Seed Corn from one acre of land, and made a profit of over $70. Two students from the present Agricultural Class will be sent to Guelph next winter for two weeks. Additional students can enter Monday, Feb. 1st, at the Agricultural Office.

WEDDING AT BATH.

The bell of old St. John's Church Bath, pealed forth its joyful chime on Wednesday, of last week, when Rev. A. L. McTear united in marriage Miss Lena McCaugherty and R. Miller. The bride was becomingly tired in her travelling suit and, owing to a recent bereavement in the family, the marriage took place quietly in the presence of only near relatives.

ELECTED WARDEN.

Mr. Robt. W. Longmore, who has been Reeve of Ernesttown and a member of the County Council for a number of years, in fact the senior member of the County Council at the present time, was on Tuesday elected Warden. Mr. Longmore has always been one of the most independent and respected members of the Council and his elevation to the Warden's chair comes to him as an added appreciation of his sterling worth and 1 years of useful service in the County Council. We congratulate Mr. Longmore on his elevation to the Wardship.

NAPANEE LADIES RIFLE ASSOCIATION.

Increasing interest seems to be taken by the ladies of the town in rifle practice. The three highest scores Tuesday night were, Miss Chinneck 24, Miss Allingham 44, Mrs. E. Boyle 44. As further organization is considered necessary, a public meeting of ladies interested is called for Monday afternoon from 4 to 6 in the Council Chamber of Town Hall. Will the who wish to join be present or send their names in to the Secretary that date.

On March 2nd the case against Dr. C. K. Robinson, accused of the murder of Blanche "Happy" Yorke, of Tamworth, will be tried before Justice Sutherland and a jury at Napanee. T. C. Robinette, K.C., his counsel, has made arrangements and will conduct his defence. The defence claim that the body was not in the house when the police first searched, but that it was placed there afterwards.

Copied from Pelleville Ontario, Jan. 23rd—Captain Herbert Roy Wilson, acting adjutant of the 49th Regiment, received word from Ottawa yesterday that he had been selected to fill the position of Deputy Adjutant and Quartermaster General of the third division. D. W. YOUNG.

Washington, Jan. 26.—Secretary Bryan in a long statement has made it plain to pro-German agitators in the United States that America cannot be blamed if Germany does not get war goods from her. He holds that the sales made to the Allies are just, and that the fact that Germany cannot get goods is due only to the fact that Great Britain has control of the seas. The depriving of Germany by England of these supplies is simply the spoils going to the victor. This statement is expected to silence for all time the complaints of what President Wilson has called "hyphenated Americans."

The Enterprise Farmer's Club held a very successful Oyster Supper in Keech's Hall, Enterprise, last Tuesday. About 25 members and their wives were present and after an enjoyable supper, prepared by the ladies, there followed a lively program of music and recitations. Speeches were given by the officers of the Association and Mr. C. S. Tregillus of the Department of Agriculture Napanee. The Club, though small, is doing a great deal for the farmers in the Enterprise District, and the business this year has amounted close on to a thousand dollars already in the form of carloads of feed, etc., and hope to do better than that in the future.

We have just been informed that the contract has been let by the Robinson Co., Limited, to make extensive alterations to the interior of their store. On the ground floor all the division walls will be replaced with steel beams and columns, converting the four stores on the main floor into one immense store. A new office with vault will be added to the rear. A change will be made in the stairway leading to the first floor up. New shelving and fixtures will be installed in keeping with the re-arrangement of the departments. What is now the Millinery Department show rooms, will, with the replacing of wall with steel arch, make the space all in one with main floor store. The Robinson Co., are to be congratulated for their progressiveness and commended for their good citizenship in proceeding with this big undertaking during war time.

PROF. LANG'S LECTURE.

Those who had the good fortune to hear Prof. A. E. Lang, of Victoria College University, of Toronto, last Friday night, when he lectured before the Lennox and Addington Historical Society, have a better and clearer idea of the reasons why Germany went into the present conflict. His subject, "Conditions in Germany as I saw them before the war," was treated in a most delightful manner. Throughout the lecture Prof. Lang told of personal characteristics of some of Germany's leaders, men who have influenced thought in that country, and showed how that influence has had a bad effect. Prof. Lang lived in Berlin for about five months in the winter of 1912-1913 and during those months spent most of his time studying the people of the country and particularly those in authority and the leaders of the various political parties in the Reichstag. He spoke with a clear vision of the situation. Outside of the fact that the lecture seemed too short, although Prof. Lang spoke for an hour and a quarter, we have nothing but praise for this latest success of the Historical Society. The hall was well filled with a thoroughly representative audience and the lecturer could not possibly have had better attention. We hope that he will soon favor Napanee again. The next meeting of the Society was announced for Friday evening, February 26th, when the subject will probably be "Russia and the Russian People." The meeting closed with "God Save the King."

TAMWORTH VS. VERONA.

The hockey match played on the Tamworth rink on Saturday evening was one of the best ever seen in that village. The game was clean and swift from the start. The home team was not at its best, two of its best players being off duty, and the visiting team were also short one of their best men. Mr. Calvin Trousdale acted as referee. As a referee he was a brilliant success—alert, active, impartial. Rarely did he miss an error in the game and his rulings were always fair. Fortunately the number of penalties he had to deal out were few, Bradshaw and Miller of the home team being the only two to need disciplining. Williams, the Verona goal keeper proved himself a wonderful asset, stopping a shower of shots fired on him. His clear sight and quickness of movement make him a tower of strength. In combination work Verona easily outclassed Tamworth, though Wm. Hanes, the Tamworth centre, made some excellent passes. Letch, the Tamworth cover-point, made some swift rushes and for individual play perhaps showed the best work on the ice, but his individual play was scarcely a match for combination work, and before the game was more than half over the victory of Verona was assured. One of the most pleasing features was the good feeling shown on both sides, the only disagreeable feature being an attempt by Bradshaw to dispute the ruling of referee and time keeper. Verona proved fair players and generous victors, while Tamworth lost in good spirit.

NAPANEE VS. BELLEVILLE.

The second senior hockey match was played on Friday night between the Belleville and Napanee teams and resulted in a win for the locals by the close score of 9-7. The game was one of the fastest exhibitions of hockey seen on local ice for some seasons, the ice being very keen and enabling the players on both sides to extend themselves to the limit. In the first period Belleville was leading by a score of 3-2, in the second period it was a tie, 4-all, while in the last period Napanee scored 5 goals to their opponents 3.

The game was a little rough as the play progressed and had the referee nipped this in the bud, the spectators would have been better pleased. In the second period a mixup occurred between Blute, of Napanee, and Moore, of Belleville, and James Hartwick, who is better known as 'Dummy' took 'Tom's' part and landed the Belleville player a beauty. However, the players of both teams succeeded in pacifying the combatants and the play was resumed. The puck was hardly ever out of the Belleville goal in the last period, and "Finn," the Belleville goaler, stopped numerous shots. He saved his team from a very bad beating. The Napanee boys could outskate their checks time after time, but were not content to pass the puck at opportune moments and lost many chances to score by hogging the puck. Bobbie Stark on right played a hard game as did Soby at centre. A regrettable feature of the game was an accident to Harry Steacy, the Napanee goal tender, who received a broken collar bone in a tumble in front of the Napanee goal. Harry gamely continued in the game, although suffering from pain. Mr. Phillips, of Belleville, acted as referee. The lineup of the locals was as follows: Goal, H. Steacy; Right defence, G. Grange; Left defence, Wm. McLaughlin; Rover, H. Schermehorn; Centre, J. Soby; Left wing, T. Blute; Right wing, R. Stark. The return game will likely be played next Wednesday. The girls' hockey team will also accompany them and play a team of Belleville girls.

SUDDEN DEATH ON TRAIN.

Shortly after boarding a C. N. R. coach at the Kingston station Monday afternoon en route to his home in Marlbank, Michael McGrath, aged fifty-eight years, lurched forward and died immediately. He had just left the Hotel Dieu, where he was a patient. Coroner Dr. Mundell decided that his death was due to heart failure.

NOTICE TO WOMEN'S INSTITUTES.

Mr. Geo. A. Putman, Supt., of Women's Institutes, Parliament Buildings, Toronto, has arranged to have Miss Gertrude Gray spend three weeks in Napanee and vicinity, beginning Feb. 22nd, and is holding a Domestic Science Class for two weeks and to spend one week in organizing new Women's Institutes in Lennox and Addington. It is proposed to hold one week's Domestic Science course in Napanee and if the Women's Institute request it, special course lasting a few days will be held at several outside points in the County. All Women's Institute members are requested to write Mr. G. B. Curran, Supt. of Agriculture, Napanee, for full information in regard to this course, including list of lectures and to arrange for meeting.

Remember the Ice Races on Feb. 10th, at the Napanee Driving Park. For full particulars see large bills.

We would like to call the attention of the readers of this paper to our carefully selected lines of Ebony and Leather Goods. Gifts of this nature are always in good taste and very acceptable. Realizing the general financial depression we have been careful to mark all our goods at rock bottom prices, and feel able to assure our patrons that we have a gift here at a price to suit every purse.

CHOCOLATES

We have just received today a large shipment of candy from Patterson's, Toronto. Everyone is aware of the high quality of the candy made by this firm, and no gift to a young lady would be more acceptable than one of these packages.
